Lane Quits Committee, Mahoney May Get Post

Governor Cites 'Press of Business'; Primary Opponents Now in Harmony

(Related Stories on Page 7)

BALTIMORE, Oct. 30 (AP). Governor Lane resigned as Democratic National Committeeman for Maryland today, and there were strong indications the post may go to George P. Mahoney, his opponent in the bitter party primary.

The reports that Mahoney will get the job were strengthened when the Baltimore contractor, himself, told 600 women at a party harmony rally here a few hours after the Lane announcement that "instead of going back to the cows and chickens, Mahoney is going with Governor Lane to see that beyond a doubt he will be our next Governor."

And Governor Lane responded: "If I have anything to do with it, George, you're not going to be left to monkey with those cows and chickens."

Mahoney has a large farm in Baltimore County. He and Lane engaged in one of the hardest-fought Democratic primaries in Maryland history. Lane won renomination on the basis of convention unit votes, although Mahoney had about 17,000 more popular votes.

Mahoney's speech today was his first specific indorsement of Lane.

Democratic Party leaders said it was more than probable that Mahoney would be the next Democratic National Committeeman.

They characterized the move as another phase of the Governor's attempt to restore party harmony after the free-swinging primary.

The Governor gave no reason except "press of State business" for his action in a telegram of resignation to William M. Boyle, chairman of the national committee.

Either the Democratic State Central Committee or the Democratic State convention, which is scheduled to reconvene soon after the November 7 election, could recommend a successor to Lane.

Governor Lane told the gathering that "I have never seen sportsmanship more magnificently demonstrated than George P. Mahoney demonstrated it today."

Record Price Of $11,000 Paid For Cow in Md.

FREDERICK, Md., Oct. 30 (Spl.). A Montgomery County cattle breeder today was paid a world record price for a polled Hereford female.

C. C. Potter, Pottstown, Pa., paid $11,000 for S. V. Lady Setston IV, to A. G. Rolfe & Sons of Poolesville. Potter also paid $9000 for a half-sister of the animal.

Rolfe said the new top price replaces a $10,700 sale at Denver, Colo., last year. Buyers from 19 States attended the Rolfe sale here today. The auction, described as one of the largest Hereford sales in the East this year, grossed $88,975 for an average of $1744 a head. S. V. Lady Stetson IV is a daughter of A. L. F. Choice Domino VI, the $35,000 bull purchased three years ago by Rolfe at Knoxville, Tenn.

Gannett Urges Dewey to Quit Or 'Be Retired'

Publisher Declines To Back Governor After Hanley Affair

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Oct. 30 (AP). Publisher Frank E. Gannett, once a confidant of Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, broke publicly with him today and declared he would not vote for his reelection.

The rift between the Governor and the prominent Republican publisher was aired in a statement in which Gannett said he objected to "methods used to get the (gubernatorial) nomination."

At the same time Gannett explained he will not vote Democratic. He denied a report that he would order his papers to support Representative Walter A. Lynch, Democratic candidate for Governor.

When a newsman in New York City asked him about the effect of Gannett's stand on his reelection chances, Dewey refused to comment further.

In a statement addressed to the editor of his own paper, the Rochester Times-Union, the publisher said:

"I personally will vote the Republican ticket except that I cannot conscientiously vote for the Republican candidate for Governor, because of methods used to get the nomination.

"I have supported Mr. Dewey many times, but I have concluded that for the good of the Republican Party, he should retire or be retired."

The statement was in strange contrast to the Dewey-Gannett relations of a few years ago. Gannett was a frequent luncheon guest at the New York Executive Mansion.

First public parting of the ways was apparent in 1948 when Gannett contributed $3000 to the Wisconsin campaing fund of Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

Gannett, who himself once had hopes of winning the GOP gubernatorial and presidential nominations, this year backed Lieut. Gov. Joe R. Hanley for Governor until Hanley withdrew in September.

Hanley mentioned a Gannett loan in his now famous letter telling Representative W. Kingsland Macy, Suffolk County Republican leader, that he had decided to

Ohio Vote Seen Key to GOP's Future

Ferguson Reported Cutting Lead of Taft, Symbol of Old Guard

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Oct. 30.—Old-time Republicanism in this State is in a bare-knuckle struggle with organized labor for stakes bigger than Ohio's Senate seat.

This could be the last stand of the GOP Old Guard as symbolized in the person of Robert A. Taft and possibly of the Republican Party as we know it today.

In betting circles, Taft is still a 6-to-5 favorite over State Auditor Joseph T. (Jumping Joe) Ferguson, the hitherto unknown little man put up by the Democrats and supported as a last resort by labor.

But you can't find any loose money on this race. Backed into a corner, the most ardent supporters of both candidates confess their uncertainty.

Republicans tell you they "feel in their bones" that Taft will win, but many of them say they are "scared."

Spokesmen for organized labor, making the really central fight on Taft through an all-inclusive "United Labor League of Ohio" concede privately this is a tight race that could swing by a few thousand votes either way.

Just as labor concentrated funds, literature and talent here to stop the coauthor of the Taft-Hartley Act so have many conservative Republicans from all over the country pinned their hopes and their dollars on Taft.

Said a fairly typical old-time Republican: "If he (Taft) loses, no politician will ever have the guts to stand up against labor again."

"Nonsense," replied a Ferguson Democrat. "Taft's defeat would be the best thing that ever happened to the Republican Party. They'd have to look for a new face for '52, and Lord knows they need one."

Actually Taft is running against his own record in this race, rather than against the bespectacled little man who has been reelected State auditor every four years since 1937, with clockwork regularity.

Taft's record has been compiled by the labor league in a 218-page volume, known as the "Black

Substantial Cut in U. S. Aid To Britain Rumored in London

LONDON, Oct. 30 (U.P.).—The United States has informed Chancellor of the Exchequer Hugh Gaitskell that a "substantial cut" will be made in Marshall Plan aid to Britain, informed sources disclosed today.

The sources said American Marshall Plan officials have even suggested that European Recovery Plan benefits to Britain might be terminated completely because of Britain's rapid recovery.

The sources said the amount of the cut was not fixed and negotiations between British and ERP officials would set the amount.

The sources also said Britain would press for continuation of substantial aid.

(Informed sources in Washington last night denied that a decision had been made on any impending cut in aid to Britain. They said Gaitskell was told the question of further aid should be reviewed in future talks in the light of Britain's economic recovery and of the new pressures upon it for rearmament.

(It was pointed out Britain has already been alloted its share of the first six months economic aid of the current fiscal year's appropriations.)

Britain has received $3,750,000,000 in Marshall Plan aid.

The British treasury announced that gold and dollar reserves September 30 were $2,756,000,000, highest since the war—a gain of $334,000,000 since June.

Pact Chiefs Side-Step Germany

11-to-1 Deadlock On Use of Germans Forces Decision For Further Study

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Defense Ministers of the 12 North Atlantic Treaty Organization nations last night sidestepped the issue of including German troops in the proposed western European army by referring the whole controversy to the NATO Military Committee and Council of Deputies.

After a day of futile effort to solve an 11-to-1 impasse—France versus the other powers—the conference passed a resolution laying aside the German rearmament question, The Washington Post learned.

There was no decision reached as to the time and place of further consideration of the latter problem last night. However, due to the urgency of the situation and the fact the NATO uniformed military chiefs are here, it was regarded as likely that they would reconvene here soon, perhaps next week.

Talks May End Today

Last night's resolution probably means that the Defense Ministers can finish their conference today. They already are in agreement on the forces to be contributed to the proposed western European force by the NATO powers and need only formally ratify action taken Saturday on this score.

Also up for decision is the organization of an international staff and headquarters to be headed by a supreme commander. The 12 nations have been in agreement that an American should be named to the post and Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower is the unanimous choice for the post.

President Truman would make the selection if the conference formally asks that an American be named.

The ministers put off a scheduled field inspection trip of American military posts to meet again this morning at 9:30. The original plan called for completing the conference yesterday.

Problem Military

The thought behind the reference of the German rearmament question to the committee of military chiefs is that the problem essentially is a military one. France has argued that Germans should be integrated into the Western European force only in battalion size units and after a European Council with an over-all defense minister is formed.

The Council of Deputies, which normally meets in London, was also included in the resolution, so the political phases of the German rearmament problem as far as it applies to the present issue can be

Lama Asks India Help Stop Foe

Appeal Is Made For 'Diplomatic' Step as Invading Force Nears Lhasa

(See editorial, Roof of the World, on Page 12)

NEW DELHI, India, Oct. 30 (U.P.).—The boy Dalai Lama of Tibet appealed to India for diplomatic help today, and was reported preparing to flee to this country for refuge as Chinese Communist spearheads thrust within 200 miles of his capital of Lhasa.

Official Indian government reports, which finally reached here after days of uncertainty, left no doubt that the Communists were well started on a full-scale invasion. They have passed disputed border territory, it was indicated.

Reliable advices from Lhasa said the Communists were within 200 miles of Lhasa—10 days' march along the ancient silk caravan route—and numbered in all up to 100,000 men.

Dr. Sinha, the Indian government representative in Lhasa, advised Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru that the government of the 15-year-old "living Buddha" had appealed to him for "diplomatic" aid.

The possibility was discussed here that Tibet might appeal direct to the United Nations for help. But late reports indicated that the invasion was moving too fast to permit effective diplomatic action.

A report by Dr. Sinha to the government gave the following time table of the Communist invasion:

The Tibetans gave up the old stronghold of Lolungchung (Lho Dzong), 13,400 feet up in the Himalayas, October 22. Lolungchung is 310 miles east of Lhasa on the caravan route.

Last Friday the Communists took Shihtu (Shobando), 280 miles from Lhasa, and today they were reported in the neighborhood of Alamdo.

Official advices emphasized that Tibet asked Nehru for diplomatic aid—not for military help or even for reference to the U. N. Security Council.

India Remains Neutral, Despite Plea, Envoy Says

NEW YORK, Oct. 30 (AP).—India "cannot change its attitude on neutrality" to aid Tibet, despite that country's invasion by Communist China forces, Mme. Vijaya L. Pandit, India's Ambassador to the United States, said today.

"What happened in Tibet is unfortunate, but we still want to settle things peacefully and my government is doing what it can in that direction," Mme. Pandit told a forum of the Pan-Pacific Women's Association.

Tibet's government has appealed to India for help.

Puerto Rico Quells Revolt By Nationalists; 23 Dead

BULLETIN

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico, (Tuesday) Oct. 31 (AP).—The government today called out 3500 national guardsmen to suppress a Nationalist uprising, the worst in the island's history.

The guardsmen—armed with with machineguns, bazookas and other weapons—were expected to attack Nationalist-held Jayuya, 50 miles southwest of San Juan, at dawn. Two companies were enroute to the town of 1800 reported to be almost completely destroyed by fire.

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico, Oct. 30 (AP).—Anti-United States Nationalist rebels fired on the Governor's Palace here and bombed and burned police stations in several other towns in a brief and bloody revolt today, but the government said the uprising had been crushed.

At least 23 dead were counted—9 rebels and 13 police, one fireman—but reports from the outlying areas were still sketchy.

The Nationalists, extremists who demand complete independence and denounced the United States as an armed invader of this island, began their rebellion in two southern coastal towns with attacks on the police stations.

Similar risings followed quickly in three towns in the center of the island, one on the northern coast, and in San Juan, where police clashed with the rebels in front of the Governor's Palace and at the post office.

Gov. Luis Munoz Marin interpreted the attack on the palace as an attempt to murder him and said this was in accord with "Communist and Fascist" practices.

A government source said the Nationalist Party—a small but well organized political group which often echoes the Communist line—staged the risings in an attempt to embarrass the administration of Governor Marin, which is pledged to continue Puerto Rico's status as a territory of the United States.

Governor Munoz was closeted this afternoon with Gen. Louis Esteves of the National Guard on the situation. The 296th National Guard Battalion was on the alert for trouble. The commissioner of public education ordered the schools closed.

The first outbreak came in Ponce on the southern coast,

Rebels Drive To Encircle Laokay Fort

French Red River Line Is Broken Below and Above Besieged Post

SAIGON, Indo-China, Oct. 30 (U.P.).—Viet Minh forces have breached the French Red River line above and below Laokay in an attempt to encircle the besieged northern frontier fort, a military spokesman said today.

The spokesman said rebel troops ferried the river from west to east on a flotilla of rafts at a point 18 miles southeast of Laokay in the vicinity of Phu Lo. The rafts, spotted near Phu Lo last Thursday, have been the target of repeated aerial bombardment.

A second smaller unit, which the spokesman asserted was fresh from the training camps of Communist China, forced the river at an unidentified point northwest of Laokay. The spokesman did not say what disposition had been made of French troops, last reported dug in along the river's west bank.

Laokay lies on the east bank of the Red River, 160 miles northwest of Hanoi.

A French counter-attack near Laokay itself silenced a Red battery of mortars and machine guns that had been pounding the adjoining air field for two days, pockmarking the runways.

French warplanes continued to bomb and strafe enemy concentrations in the Laokay area.

The spokesman also indicated that the Communists had driven to the walls of Fort Pennequin, a small outpost east of Laokay. This was believed to be the main body of enemy troops.

The spokesman said Viet Minh rebels ambushed a French squad near Phulangthuong, about 30 miles northeast of Hanoi, inflicting losses. Phulangthuong is on the new French defense line.

Soviet Plans To Ignore Lie, Vishinsky Says

Russians Won't Deal With U. N. Secretary If His Term Is Extended

LAKE SUCCESS, Oct. 30 (AP).—The Soviet Union will refuse to deal with Trygve Lie if the Norwegian's term as United Nations Secretary General is extended, Russian Foreign Minister Andrei Y. Vishinsky said today.

Vishinsky denounced Lie as a "two-faced" follower of American policies. He announced the Soviet Union's stand at a news conference called in a last-minute effort to keep the U. N. Assembly from extending Lie's term three years. But the Assembly, meeting tomorrow, is expected to approve a 14-nation proposal to extend the term.

The Soviet foreign minister called his news conference shortly after his country failed to keep the Lie issue in the Security Council, where Russia earlier used the veto in an effort to block Lie's reelection. The Council voted 7-1 against the Russian move to keep the issue out of the Assembly.

[The Russian threat against Lie was made at a closed meeting of the Security Council, the New York Herald Tribune News Service reported. The Russian attitude, as expressed by Soviet Delegate Yakov A. Malik, drew sarcasm from Ales Bebler of Yugoslavia.

[The U. N., Bebler said in effect, was getting tired of hearing Russia pin the tag of illegality on U. N. actions, organs or persons whenever the Russians didn't get their way. Furthermore, he said, the Russians didn't seem to believe their own stories on what is illegal and what isn't.

[He recalled that the Russians walked out of the Security Council early this year over the Chinese issue, contending Nationalist China was illegally in the Council, and that Council decisions taken with Nationalist Chinese participation were illegal. Nevertheless, said Debler, in August Russia returned to preside over the "illegal" Council.]

Vishinsky told reporters:

"The USSR delegation declares, and I will do so tomorrow (before the Assembly) that if Trygve Lie is imposed as Secretary General for any new term of office, the Soviet Government will not regard him and deal with him as Secretary General of the United Nations."

Vishinsky said Lie "played a

2 Divisions Are Reported In Action In North

Yanks Rush to Help Allies at Hamhung; Americans in West Suffer Heavy Loses

SEOUL (Tuesday), Oct. 31 (AP).—Resurgent Reds, reported unofficially to be bolstered by two Chinese Communist divisions, were on a counter-offensive today in northeast Korea and fought savage defensive battles in the northwest.

A United States spokesman acknowledged that at least one Communist regiment was in action in northeast Korea. There Reds stabbed within 25 miles of the industrial center of Hamhung and virtually cut off a South Korean regiment.

A field dispatch said the regiment was holding firm while a relief column hurried up from Hamhung and low-flying United States Marine Corsairs attacked the Reds.

One hundred twenty miles up the east coast from Hamhung, a South Korean patrol moved into Kilchu, 65 miles southeast of the Manchurian border.

Two Chinese Divisions Reported

Associated Press Correspondent Bem Price quoted a captured North Korean officer as saying that two Chinese Communist divisions were in the encircling drive towards Hamhung. American advisers made no such identification of the two divisions, however, and an American intelligence officer said he was skeptical.

In the northwest the British Commonwealth Brigade had to fight street by street to capture the highway hub of Chongju on the main road to the northwest border city of Sinuiju. Then Americans swept through, ready to drive up that road.

Other American forces are dug in near Kusong, 26 miles north of Chongju and 34 miles from the Manchurian border.

Fresh Enemy Troops

The South Korean Second Army Corps, operating on the right flank of the Americans, attributed reverses of the past three days to the weight of fresh enemy troops. Second Corps officers insisted many of those troops were Chinese.

"While the United States Eighth Army so far has declined to give official recognition to their claims, Second Corps staff officers insist it is no token Chinese Red force which already has chewed up one of their divisions," said Associated Press Correspondent Jack MacBeth.

Foe from Manchurian Border

MacBeth said senior South Korean officers and their American military advisers believe their forces are up against enemy troops "which have come down from the Manchurian border."

While the immediate situation appeared serious for the South Korean Republican Third Division, strong American reinforcements were within 30 miles of Hamhung on the south and 75 miles on the north.

Elsewhere along a 250-mile arc, United Nations forces edging toward the snowy fringes of the Manchurian border found their advance stalled by bitter Communist resistance.

The South Korean Sixth Division pulled back advance ele-

Mercury Reaches 81, Only a Degree Below Record

The thermometer almost but not quite reached a record high for October 30 yesterday.

Coming within one degree of the record 82 set for the day in 1946, the temperature leveled off at 81 degrees around 3 p. m., hovered there for several hours and then started downward.

The weather forecaster refused to get excited about the heat.

"On October 31, 1946, the thermometer went as high as 84 degrees and some years the temperature has been higher than today's as late as December," he said.

He promised more of the same—blue skies, a bright sun and temperature in the low 80s—for today.

Meyer of The Washington Post Reaches 75th Milestone Today

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

Eugene Meyer, chairman of the board of The Washington Post, is 75 today.

The anniversary finds him very much in harness, both as an executive and as reporter; optimistic about the course of world events, and confident that Washington will continue to grow as the Nation itself grows.

"I've always been an optimist," Meyer said yesterday, "and I expect to remain one as long as I live."

But optimism, he hastened to add, did not mean blindness to weaknesses that develop and need to be recognized and corrected.

Meyer was born in Los Angeles, Calif., October 31, 1875. In 1933, after a career as an investment banker and in various Government posts under Presidents Wilson, Harding, Coolidge, Hoover and Roosevelt, he started to retire. Instead, in June, 1933, he bought The Washington Post and at 57 started out on a new career of public service.

Over the years, he has shown himself to be a pretty good reporter. In 1947 he visited Europe, wrote an article about the need for the Marshall Plan, and, with six other Post men, won a National Headliners' Club award.

Recently Meyer went back to Europe. As first president of the World Bank (a post for which he was named by President Truman), he was invited to attend the annual meeting of the board of directors of that institution in Paris. It offered him an opportunity for a fresh appraisal of Europe.

After some leg work in England and France, in the course of which he talked to key men in both countries, Meyer detected "a fresh wind of strength and assurance" blowing in Europe.

He wrote an article about his findings for The Post, and it was

Consistory Approves as Dogma The Assumption of Mary

VATICAN CITY, Oct. 30 (AP).—The decision of Pope Pius XII to proclaim as Catholic dogma that the Virgin Mary was "assumed body and soul into the glory of Heaven" received the approval today of 35 cardinals and more than 500 bishops from all parts of the world.

The proclamation will be issued by the pontiff Wednesday in what will be the most spectacular and important ceremony of the 1950 Holy Year.

At a semiprivate consistory, the Pope outlined the reasons for his decision to define the dogma; the first in nearly 100 years to be proclaimed by a Pope.

His action, he told the assembly, had been preceded by much expert study. Then a circular letter was sent to all bishops of the church, asking their views.

"In a wonderful and unanimous chorus," the Pope said, "the voices of the pastors and of the faithful from every part of the world reached us professing the same faith and requesting the same thing as supremely desired by all. We judged then that there was no reason for further delay, and we decided to proceed to the definition of the dogma."

More than eight million lay Catholics have in the past added their pleas to those of thousands of clerics for pronouncement of the dogma. Although he had received widespread affirmation, the

609 Doomed After Trials By So. Korea

SEOUL, Oct. 30 (AP).—Republic of Korea military and civil courts have decreed the death penalty for 609 persons for wartime offenses since the Red invasion June 25.

Court authorities said 2801 cases involving 3416 persons including 115 women have been tried.

The charges included aiding the enemy, conspiracy, desertion, illegal confiscation of property, murder, rape and arson.

Forty-eight were sentenced to life imprisonment and 642 to from six months to 20 years hard labor. Ninety-nine were freed.

The remainder await action by civil courts.

The convictions are subject to review by the Army Chief of Staff.

Presidential review of death sentences was abolished by the Korean national emergency law.

The trials are under the supervision of Judge Advocate General Col. Yang Chung Soo.

Asked if the defendants can employ counsel, Yang said:

"Yes, but we have to examine the quality of the lawyers beforehand, because there may be some Communist sympathizers among them."

Stragglers Reported In Hills by Thousands

UNITED STATES TENTH CORPS HEADQUARTERS, Korea Oct. 30 (AP).—A band of bypassed Red soldiers last night looted four small villages near Wonsan on the east coast of Korea.

They took all the villagers' cattle and belongings with them.

United States Marines reported no contacts with the Red guerrilas after Sunday's unopposed Marine occupation of burned-out Kojo, 35 miles south of Wonsan.

Korean civilians told of "thousands" of stragglers in civilian clothes in the rugged hills north of Kojo.

A United States Army Tenth Corps officer said the 400-man "diamond mountain gang" of bypassed Reds may have made its way north. The gang was operating south of Kojo.

WITH U. N. FORCES in North Korea, Oct. 30 (AP).—Allied troops today discovered 80 bodies of North Korean civilians at Pakchon, apparently murdered by retreating Red soldiers.

Their hands were tied behind their backs.

Bandits Hold Up Bay State Bank, Get $56,000 Loot

NEWTON, Mass., Oct. 30 (U.P.).—Two bandits carrying a submachinegun and wearing Halloween masks held up a branch bank here today and fled with $56,066 in cash and checks.

The gunmen escaped in an automobile driven by a third man disguised as a woman as scores of State and local police and FBI agents converged on the Newtonville branch of the Newton National Bank.

The holdup was the biggest in New England since January 17 when seven bandits held up Brink's, Inc., in Boston and fled with $1,500,000.

The bank robbery was staged with split-second precision about 10 minutes after the bank had opened and less than a minute after the night vault had been unlocked. Bank Manager Charles E. Smith, 40, and three tellers, Mrs. Gloria Doherty, 28, Mrs. Ruth Jobson, 35, and Roy Boudreau, 20, were behind the cages.

Coalition Cabinet Of 13 Presented By Ben-Gurion

JERUSALEM, Oct. 30 (AP).—Premier David Ben-Gurion presented a new broad coalition cabinet of 13 members to Israel's Knesset (parliament) tonight.

The cabinet includes seven members of Ben-Gurion's ruling Mapai (Labor) Party, one nonpartisan, three religious-bloc members, one representative of the Progressive Party, and one from the party of Sephardic Jews.

There are two newcomers to cabinet rank. They are Jack M. Geri, described as a nonpartisan with liberal tendencies, and Pinhas Lubianiker, former secretary general of Histadrut, Israel's trade union movement. Gering was named Minister of Trade and Industry and Lubianiker Minister of Agriculture and Production.

By The Associated Press

Senators heard yesterday how more than 3,500,000 pounds of war-useful copper was shuttled around the world from Japan to New York to Communist China before the trade was choked off last July.

Another deal sent more than 12,000 steel boiler tubes to China from the British-occupied zone of Germany. All the transactions were handled by American export firms.

Senator O'Conor (D., Md.), chairman of a Senate Commerce Subcommittee which took the testimony, declared the Chinese Communists had "outsmarted and outmaneuvered" American officials in procuring the copper.

The two United States exporters who handled the shipments testified, however, that the copper was purchased and transshipped legally. Although the export of United States-produced copper to Communist-controlled areas has been banned since July, 1949, controls tightening up sale of the Japanese copper were not instituted until July of this year.

Importers Testify

O'Conor's subcommittee is investigating shipments of oil, metals and other strategic materials to the Chinese Communists.

Before the committee yesterday were Walter Spitzer, import manager of the Kane Import Co., and Thomas A. Lynch, manager of the American Industrial Products Co., both of New York City.

Spitzer testified his firm, on five separate occasions, bought Japanese copper from other firms and shipped it from New York to China on ships of the Isbrantsen Line. Four of the five lots of 99.9 percent-pure copper already were aboard Isbrantsen ships at the time of the purchase. The shipments, totalling 3,551,051 pounds, all went to the North China Import Corp. O'Conor said that corporation was Communist-controlled.

Spitzer's company also handled the deal which sent the boiler tubes from Germany to Communist China.

Lynch testified he sold a total of 356,000 pounds of copper to two Chinese firms—the China Material Corp. of Tientsin last March, and the North China Import Corp. last April. Lynch said he got the metal from the Metal Trades Corp. The first shipment, he explained, was brought to New York by the Isbrandtsen Line's Flying Arrow, and sent to China on the Isbrandtsen's Brooklyn Heights.

O'Conor Puzzled

Spitzer testified his firm bought the copper from Metal Traders, Inc., the Overseas Metal & Ore Co. and Ayrton Metals Co. of New York City.

Chairman O'Conor, addressing officials of the Commerce Department's Office of International Trade (OIT), said he was unable to understand why it took American officials so long to halt the shipments.

James L. Feeley, chief of OIT's metals and mineral control division, said the transaction took place before he took over direction of the section, Ted Thau, counsel for the enforcement section of OIT, said the trade office consulted with officials of SCAP (Supreme Command of Allied Powers at Tokyo) last March as soon as it was learned that Japanese copper was being shipped in transit through United States ports to Japan.

No Good to Act Alone

He said both SCAP and OIT began drawing up new rules and that stricter controls were instituted by the two organizations in June and July, respectively.

Nathan Ostroff, OIT general counsel, said it wouldn't have done any good for the United States alone to have imposed tight intransit controls on such shipments. Without parallel action by other nations, he said, the trade merely would have been diverted to other ports.

Spitzer said he checked with the United States Customs Service on the five copper orders he handled and was informed it was "in order to ship the material in transit or in bond." He said he hoped the hearings would produce some "very clear results that will govern all of our exports."

Spitzer said he bought the steel boiler tubes for the North China Import Corp. and other customers in Communist China.

Bell Report Pleased Quirino, Ambassador Cowen Reports

Myron Cowen, United States Ambassador to the Philippines, arrived by plane in Manila yesterday and told newsmen he thought the chances are "splendid" that the Filipinos will accept and carry out the Bell mission report.

The report by a United States group headed by Daniel Bell, president of the American Security & Trust Co. of Washington, proposed 250-million-dollar aid for the Philippines conditioned on sweeping reforms, increased taxation and United States supervision of the spending of the funds.

The Ambassador, in Washington for an eye operation, said he deferred his trip until he could deliver the report in person to President Quirino of the Philippines last Saturday.

"President Quirino telephoned me about an hour after he had received the report and expressed complete pleasure with it," Cowen said.

"The Philippines President told me he would call his leaders together for conferences and study to prepare the minds of members of Congress for consideration of its recommendations."

Ambassador Cowen said he "couldn't read anything into the Bell report which would have any tendency to impinge on the sovereignty of the Philippine people."

Questioned about appendices which have not yet been made public, the ambassador said several of these would be delivered to President Quirino shortly.

"The appendices have primarily to do with implementations of the mechanical and other branches of the report," he said.

United Front Sought By Philippines Leaders

MANILA, Oct. 30 (AP).—President Quirino warned today against "premature speculation" on the Philippines attitude toward the Bell mission report.

Quirino's statement followed a conference with top Filipino leaders in Government, finance and industry to seek a "united and solid front in the Philippines position and action on the report."

The conferees were handed copies of the 56,000-word report and asked to meet again Thursday.

The press officer said Senor Eulogio Rodriguez, sr., president of the opposition Nacionalista Party and one of the conferees, pledged "conscientious cooperation."

Malaya Police Say Reds Fired On Guards Near U. S. Consulate

SINGAPORE, Oct. 30 (AP).—Malayan police said Communist terrorists engaged Malayan guards in a 25-minute gun battle today near the American consulate at Kuala Lumpur. No casualties were reported.

Police said "Communist bandits" opened fire on the constables assigned to guard the consulate. There was no evidence, the police said, that the attack was aimed at the consulate itself.

United States Consul Richard A. Poole said the guards, stationed outside the building, contended that the terrorists shot at them, but that "I was here all the time and I am convinced that is not so."

Poole said that although he had tried to stop the guards from shooting in the direction of neighboring houses, one bullet—apparently that of a guard—went through a neighbor's window and missed a sleeping baby by only two feet.

Soldiers from a nearby camp joined police in a search of the area after the shooting stopped, but were unable to find any of the terrorists.

Price Boosts Loom in 1951, Expert Says

NEW YORK, Oct. 30 (AP).—Economist Sumner H. Slichter today said prospective rises in labor costs during the next year "make a rise in prices inevitable."

Addressing the office management conference of the American Management Association, the Harvard University professor said:

"During the next 15 months, when the armed services will be increased by one and one half million and unemployment will be undoubtedly less than two million, unions will be in an unusually strong bargaining position.

"During the next year wages will undoubtedly increase faster than in 1948 and probably faster than in 1947. Even if output per man-hour were to rise by 2.5 percent, the advance in labor costs would be around 7.5 percent. If output per man-hour does not increase, or increases at substantially less than the normal rate, labor costs may rise as much as 10 percent.

"Some people believe," Slichter continued, "that higher labor costs can be absorbed out of profits. This view overlooks the fact that corporate profits after inventory valuation adjustment are now substantially lower than at any time in the last two and a half years."

Inflation Is Theme Of Foreign Trade Talks

NEW YORK, Oct. 30 (AP).—The problem of avoiding inflation while rearming the world against Communist aggression provided a common theme today for speakers at the 37th national foreign trade convention.

William McChesney Martin, jr., Assistant Secretary of the United States Treasury, stressed the need for relaxing restrictions on world trade to attain a healthy world economy.

He warned against inflation, saying "we should not sacrifice the degree of financial stability which the world has attained with much effort over the last few years by trying to finance defense through inflationary methods."

Accidents Held No. 1 Killer of Children

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 30 (AP).Accidents, including those in the home, kill more children after the age of 1 than does any single disease, a New York doctor said today.

And, declared Dr. Leona Baumgartner, among children aged 1 to 14, accidents kill more than "all the diseases put together that parents usually worry about, including poliomyelitis, scarlet fever, diphtheria, meningitis, diarrhea, measles, pneumonia and whooping cough." She addressed the American Public Health Association's annual meeting.

Yugoslav Villagers Growing Restless on Verge of Hunger

BANJA LUKA, Yugoslavia, Oct. 30 (NYHT).—Some villages in the rarely visited central section of Yugoslavia are on the verge of hunger and are restless. It is doubtful whether American aid will arrive soon enough and be distributed in time to prevent trouble here.

In one village in the drought-depleted plain of northern Bosnia, a group of 40 peasants today said they are down to about three weeks' supplies of food.

The peasants said Premier Marshall Tito's Communist government is still arresting farmers in the region who are unable to meet the compulsory corn quota, which was sharply reduced last month. Although in some areas the regime is reported to be showing greater leniency, 25 heads of families in this community of 300 persons were jailed recently.

The peasants said they are forced to provide corn to the government when they have none by selling cows or horses for cash to purchase corn in nearby towns. But the markets are now almost bare, they said.

In Sarajevo, capital of Bosnian-Herzegovinian republic, prices on the free market are slightly higher than those in Belgrade, where they average 100 percent above last year.

In Zenica, where Marshal Tito is building Yugoslavia's first iron and steel town, the regime is meeting the rations of about 5500 industrial workers at the guaranteed level.

In Jajce, on the Vrbas River, industrial workers in a carbide factory are receiving two sustaining meals a day. Meat is temporarily plentiful on the free market owing to the slaughter of cattle because of the lack of fodder. The best village restaurant serves eggs at prices beyond the reach of most inhabitants.

In Kluje villagers said there are enough supplies on hand to last through January.

In Banja Luka, in the government's collective farm stalls in the market place, the only foods for sale today are very small tomatoes and paprika. Potatoes are selling on the free market 300 percent higher than last year.

West Studying Ban On Strategic Goods

LONDON, Oct. 30 (U.P.).—Britain is consulting with the United States, the Commonwealth and Western European countries on a "united front" ban on exports of strategic goods to Russia and her satellites, authoritative sources said tonight.

The discussions, now in advanced stage, stemmed from an agreement by the Western foreign ministers earlier this year on the need to restrict East-West trade.

U.S. Making Spain A Base, Pole Says

LAKE SUCCESS, Oct. 30 (NYHT).—Charges that the United States is seeking to make Spain a military base and that there is a movement to "formalize the secret alliance between Franco and the United States" were hurled here today by the United Nations representatives of Poland and the Ukraine.

Washington was accused of aiding construction or reconstruction of more than 100 airdromes in Spain, of giving assistance in the setting up of other military installations there, and of approving loans to the Falangist government.

Delegates of the Communist bloc were speaking in opposition to an eight-power resolution which would revoke a four-year-old ban against maintenance of ambassadors and ministers in Madrid and against Spanish membership in any of the U. N. international agencies. The resolution, introduced Friday before the General Assembly's special political committee, will be supported by the United States.

Garcia Bauer, of Guatemala, said his delegation also will vote against the resolution sponsored by eight other Latin American nations — Bolivia, Costa Rica, the Dominican Republic, El Salvador, Honduras, Nicaragua, the Philippines and Peru. He asserted its passage would open the door "to a regime which was repudiated by the United Nations at Potsdam, San Francisco and London." Guatemala's leftist government has been increasingly anti-American in the past year.

19 Now Support Measure

Egypt, Greece and the Netherlands announced their support of the measure and thus brought to 19 the number of nations expressing their approval since debate began. Sponsors say they are certain of a majority in the General Assembly.

Juliusz Katz-Suchy, of Poland, opened today's debate with a bitter attack on the United States. He said the United States did not offer the resolution because that would be "too obvious." He insisted the United States Government wishes to "retain at least a little of the fig-leaf which hides the nakedness of its desertion of the principles for which millions fought and died in the war against fascism."

He argued there has been no change in the Franco regime since the United Nations adopted its restrictive resolution in 1946, that certain members have consistently violated that resolution and that presentation of the new resolution by those same nations is "highly immoral."

C. P. Demchenko of the Ukraine spoke disparagingly of sponsors of the resolution and "their fellow travelers." He said there has been increasing trade between Spain and the United States. He said this country is "trying to hide its face" behind the eight sponsors of the measure.

Greek Warns Guatemala

Alexis Kyrou of Greece, announcing his government's support of the resolution, warned Guatemala and Uruguay, which spoke in opposition Saturday, that their position is being "misused by others whose views are well-known." The implication was that these two Latin American countries are being used in the current debate to support the political philosophy of the Communist blocs here.

Reminding the committee her be considered a failure. She felt 1946 resolution, Marga Klompe of the Netherlands said Dutch fears of strengthening the Franco government by sanctions of any sort have now been justified. The present government of Spain has become stronger, she said, and the original resolution must therefore be considered a failure. She felt the United Nations should have the courage to admit a mistake and pointed out that maintenance of a diplomatic representative in a foreign capital does not necessarily mean approval of the government there.

The American position, as announced earlier, is that the Franco government does not constitute a threat to peace and that it should, therefore, be allowed to have representatives in such agencies as the World Health Organization, Food and Agriculture Organization and the World Bank.

The United States, the Soviet Union and 12 other nations are still to be heard in the debate, which will be resumed at 10:45 a. m. tomorrow.

Bonn to Kill Arms Plan, France Told

BONN, Germany, Oct. 30 (U.P.).—Chancellor Konrad Adenauer has warned France that the West German Parliament next week will reject French proposals for German units in an all-European army, the Christian Democratic Party press service said today.

The press service of Adenauer's party said the 74-year-old Chancellor told French High Commissioner Andre Francois-Poncet during an 80-minute closed conference that the French plan was unrealistic and would only revive the old French "Maginot (Line) mentality."

The top French representative in Germany was said to have told Adenauer that German contingents in a European army would be "on equal footing" with units from other countries and Germany would be considered an equal partner economically and politically.

American and British officials, as well, believed that French insistence that small German units only be formed for inclusion in a future West European army was impractical and might be designed to delay a German contribution to Western defense.

Niemoeller Asks Vote On German Arms Issue

DARMSTADT, Germany, Oct. 30 (U.P.).—Protestant Pastor Martin Niemoeller and Socialist Leader Kurt Schumacher today called for new elections in West Germany before the Bonn Republic makes any decision on arming Germans for the defense of western Europe.

Niemoeller, a world symbol of resistance to Naziism during the war, met with Schumacher and other Social Democratic leaders and issued a statement asserting that "a decision in this matter (German rearmament) cannot be made by the present West German lower house, but only by a newly elected Parliament."

two-faced game" and is now an "echoer of the views of the United States."

Answering a question as to how the Russians would deal with Lie in the event he is continued in office, Vishinsky said:

"We shall not recognize him nor shall we have any truck with him."

He made it clear his declaration applied only to Lie and did not extend down into the lower ranks of the U. N. secretariat.

While Vishinsky was holding his news conference, the 60-Nation Political Committee of the General Assembly beat down his proposals for a five-power peace pact and a one-third cut in the armed forces of the five great powers—United States, Britain, France, China and the Soviet Union. The decision was taken on a series of the one-sided votes, usually with five Soviet bloc Nations alone voting for them.

The Russian proposal to brand the Nation first using the atomic bomb as a war criminal, based partly on the Communist-inspired Stockholm appeal, was defeated 38-5 with 18 abstaining. The committee still has to act on a counter proposal by seven countries which calls aggressive war the gravest crime against humanity.

Adonis Warrant Issued in Jersey; Charges Gambling

HACKENSACK, N. J., Oct. 30 (U.P.).—The special deputy Attorney General in charge of investigating gambling in Bergen County said tonight he has warrants for the arrest of five top gamblers including Joe Adonis, one-time criminal boss of Brooklyn.

Adonis, who moved to New Jersey when police put the heat on his activities in New York, was named in the warrants along with Salvatore Morretti of Demarest, N. J.; James P. Lynch, of Palisades Park, N. J.; Arthur Iongano of Englewood, N. J., and Anthony Guarini, of Hasbrouck Heights, N. J.

Stamler said Superior Court Judge J. Wallace Leyden signed the warrants which charge conspiracy to operate a dice game in Lodi, N. J., in 1949. He said State police tried to arrest all five today but could not find any except Guarini, who is serving from 1½ to three years in prison for bookmaking.

Truman Greets Italian, British Defense Chiefs

resolved without convening the NATO Council—the foreign ministers.

One source said last night that the deputies probably would meet with the military committee so that the whole issue could be settled at one sitting.

French opposition to the British-American plan for contribution of forces of division size and insistence on their own proposal of integration of Germans and other European troops in battalion-size units only after a form of Western European union is established, has been the one big issue at stake, delaying agreement on a unified Western European armed force.

The Anglo-American delegates and other representatives hold that integration of mixed battalions is highly impracticable. They say this and the French demand that a Western European defense minister be put in control of the unified force can only delay the vital rearmament of the West.

In Secret Session

The 12 defense ministers met in secret session again yesterday at the Inter-departmental Auditorium on Constitution ave. They adjourned for a formal meeting with President Truman at noon and went back in session after lunch.

Breaking up at 5:55 p. m., officials said only that a planned air trip to Dayton, Ohio, to see new-type planes and equipment at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base had been postponed until Friday.

They left still scheduled a trip to the Army Proving Ground, Aberdeen, Md., on Wednesday and another to the Naval Proving Ground, Dahlgren, Va., on Thursday, in hopes of an agreement today.

American defense chiefs are convinced that an effective western European armed force, capable of standing off a Russian attack, cannot be formed without German manpower. In such a case, Congress would hardly vote the billions necessary, not only for our own contribution, but to provide armament for all—including the French—if the French refuse to agree to German participation except on their own terms.

American officials understand the French emotional reaction to the German rearmament question and their fear of a resurgent, rearmed Reich. But they feel that adequate safeguards are provided under the plan against German militarism getting out of hand; and that the threat of Communist aggression against western Europe is so great that not only must the risk be taken but that quick action is necessary.

Many political and economic problems would have to be worked out, it is pointed out, before a western European council could be organized. What would be its powers? Would the proposed Defense Minister be a Frenchman under the Paris plan? The proposal, advanced last week, never has been spelled out publicly.

Furthermore, organization of allied military forces on a basis of each nation contributing divisions — the integral army unit — has been done in the past and offers some promise of success. But differences of language, military tables of organization, communications systems, and so forth, offer enough problems in such a setup, military men feel, whereas an army made up of divisions containing French, German, Belgian and perhaps American or British battalions would be subject to endless confusion and perhaps prove a hollow reed in an emergency.

Shinwell Stresses Need of Security Force

NYHT News Service

Emanuel Shinwell, British defense secretary, told an audience at the National Press Club yesterday there was no evidence that Russia intended to embark on a major armed conflict at the present time.

"But we cannot afford to take risks," the British minister added, warning that Communist aggression would be fought wherever it appeared, in Indo-China or Malaya as elsewhere, and that the world must not slip back into easy ways once the immediate peril of Korea was over.

"What we have got to do now," he said, "what in fact we have been trying to do here this past weekend at the meetings of the NATO is to create a security force for the most vital sector of the front—in Western Europe and the Atlantic Ocean. And we have made solid progress. We are beginning to see the way ahead more clearly than at any moment since the end of the last world war.

"Machinery has been set up within the last few weeks for the United Nations to act quickly in the face of aggression. With the generous help of the United States, new forces are becoming available to tide us over the emergencies."

Shinwell said that he did not exclude the possibility of an agreement with the Russians, although he added, "But I am certain that no agreement will be worth the paper it is written on until we can speak from a position of real strength and our forces are such that we can meet across the conference table without fear of threats."

Shinwell said that British policy is to resist aggression "wherever and whenever it appears," and that the United Kingdom would maintain 10 regular divisions and 12 territorial divisions to be deployed as and where necessary. This, he said, would enable Britain to build up forces stationed on continental Europe, but he did not say by how much.

Ninety-four experts, advisers and observers are attending the UNESCO - sponsored conference, which is expected to conclude Friday with recommendations for the provisions of a new international copyright convention.

Bartender Is Accused In 18-Martini Death

WATERTOWN, Wisc., Oct. 30 (U.P.).—A bartender was accused today of serving 18 Martinis to a customer who died of a heart attack after trying to prove he was no "sissy drinker."

Rufus Johnston, 39, Watertown, downed the Martinis within a "very short time" and died 10 hours later, Acting Police Chief Herbert Vehlow said. Lansing Stoll, hotel bartender, was charged with violating a law barring sale of liquor to a person who is intoxicated or "bordering" on it.

Md. Man Injured

University Pk. GI Missing In Action

Sergt. Canter Corpl. Griffis
... Their names on casualty list

The $550 that Army Corpl. Charles E. Griffis sent home to his mother "to buy something for the house" is still waiting for him in the bank, along with his Army allotments.

Griffis, 21, son of Mrs. Hugh R. Titlow of 4203 Van Buren st., University Park, Md., was reported missing in action on October 11.

His mother said that he sent the money in a letter dated October 3, and wrote he was "shoving off," but gave no details.

After graduating from junior high school, Griffis was about to enter Eastern High School, but obtained work at Trans-World Airlines, Inc., instead. He was employed briefly by the International Harvester Co. here before enlisting in the Army in 1948.

He was shipped to Japan in the fall of 1948 and fought in Korea with the Twenty-fifth Division, Thirty-fifth Infantry regiment, his mother said.

Listed as injured on Department of Defense casualty list no. 138 is Sergt. Nelson E. Canter, 33, son of Andrew M. Canter of 4905 47th ave., Edmonston, Md.

The World War II Army veteran wrote home that he suffered a "deafness" in both ears as the result of a tank explosion, his family said. He said that the physicians believed the condition would clear in several months.

Repercussions caused by the explosion of a North Korean ammunition truck fired on by two American tanks, one of which Canter manned, caused the injury, he mentioned.

One of eight children, he enlisted in the Army in December, 1947.

After attending schools in Hughesville and Upper Marlboro, Md., he assisted his father on the family farm, and then worked at various jobs in Washington prior to volunteering for service.

Selection of leaders for Washington's proposed 70,000 to 80,000 civil defense wardens will start at a District Building meeting Thursday at 7:30 p. m.

Chief Warden Max C. Schwartz announced yesterday he had asked leaders of various civic groups, associations and clubs, including the Board of Trade and the civic and citizens associations, to meet with him that night.

Schwartz is asking each group to help select the 60 to 70 warden areas into which the District will be divided and then to submit within a few days names of "leading and capable citizens" in each area to act as the area warden.

These area wardens, in turn, will then be responsible for selecting wardens, fire watchers and messengers numbering from 60,000 to 70,000. The city will have 3600 to 3800 sector posts, Schwartz said.

Stull Appointed

At the same time, Schwartz announced appointment of Harry N. Stull, former head of the Federation of Citizens Associations, as executive assistant to the chief warden. He held the same post when Schwartz headed the air raid warden set-up here.

Also named was Thomas W. Parks, an attorney, who will be one of Schwartz's assistant chief wardens.

Meanwhile, police Capt. Francis G. Pilkerton said yesterday that he has received something over 325 applications for the proposed 4000-man auxiliary police force. About half the number already have been cleared for nonpaying jobs while the other applicants are still under investigation.

To Start Training

Pilkerton said that it now appears that he will have enough volunteers to begin six weeks of training in December. By about mid-December he expects to have at least 53 men in each of four precincts.

The plan is to assign each police precinct four 12-man squads of volunteers plus four sergeants and a lieutenant, all volunteers. They add up to one platoon. Additional men and some women will be assigned to various headquarters offices.

Pilkerton said yesterday he hopes more volunteers will soon turn up at police stations to apply for the auxiliary force. Designed as a civil defense auxiliary, the force would be equipped and eventually armed by a special $500,000 appropriation requested of the District Commissioners.

Fields of study included are literature, history, philosophy, fine arts, music and allied studies.

Yugoslav Plane Flights Over Bulgaria Charged

LONDON, Oct. 30 (U.P.).—Radio Moscow said tonight that Communist Bulgaria has accused Yugoslavia of sending warplanes on reconnaissance flights across the Bulgarian border.

"The (Bulgarian) Ministry of Foreign Affairs declares that the Yugoslav government must bear the responsibility for any possible consequences," the broadcast said.

Chinese Taking Part in North Korean Reds' Counterdrive

ments from the Manchurian border above Chosan for a distance of 30 miles.

Even the United States Fifth Regimental combat team, part of the United States Twenty-fourth Division, was forced to dig in 34 miles southeast of Manchuria's Yalu River border after meeting determined Communist resistance.

Associated Press Correspondent William Jorden reported Red mortar and small-arms fire inflicted "heavy casualties" on the Americans.

He placed the Fifth Regiment 2 miles east of Kusong, an important road and rail point on the main inland route to Communist Manchuria.

The first official American confirmation of a sizable group of Chinese Red troops in action came from a spokesman for Maj. Gen. Edward M. Almond's Tenth Corps headquarters.

The spokesman acknowledged a full Chinese Communist regiment (possibly 500 to 2000 men) had been positively identified fighting south of Changjin (Choshin) reservoir, about 40 miles south of the Manchurian border.

(In Washington the Defense Department said it had no information as yet about Chinese Communist troops in North Korea. An army officer pointed out that official reports often lag behind press field dispatches.)

Associated Press Correspondent Bem Price reported that two Communist divisions, which the South Koreans said were heavily stiffened by Chinese troops, were driving for Hamhung with orders to take the industrial center by Wednesday.

Price placed the Reds 30 miles northwest of Hamhung and on the flank of the outnumbered Twenty-sixth Regiment of the South Koreans Third Division.

A United States Marine regiment was sent to aid the South Koreans. Its location was not specified.

Price said "there is no longer any doubt that Chinese Reds are across the border in force."

A Tenth Corps spokesman, while substantiating that one Chinese Red regiment was in the fight, said Price's report "is basically on the the right track but the units mentioned are larger than our information indicates."

The spokesman indicated his headquarters would make no statement about Chinese Reds until identification was absolutely certain.

Whether such Chinese Red participation would be considered open intervention in the Korean war was not determined.

There was no immediate comment from General MacArthur's Tokyo headquarters.

(At the State Department in Washington, Press Officer Michael McDermott said that if reports of Chinese Red units in Korea should be proved, the matter would be one for the United Nations. He said the question probably would result in a report from General MacArthur to the U. N.

American officers with the South Korean First Corps said they considered the Chinese and North Korean advance on Hamhung a serious situation.

If the Reds smash through to the east coast it could pinch off both the South Korean Third and Capital divisions in northeastern Korea.

However, the unopposed landing of the United States Seventh Division at Iwop, 50 miles northeast of Hamhung, on Sunday gave the Allies a supply port for direct support of all three divisions.

Red capture of Hamhung would upset the timetable for the United Nations' advance to the Manchurian and Siberian borders on the Sea of Japan coastline.

The Capital Division had advanced 3 miles north of occupied Songjin, General MacArthur reported in a Monday war summary. It met "moderate resistance" after overcoming a stubborn band of 2000 Reds on heights overlooking Songjin. Allied planes and warships blasted the entrenched Reds.

The drive for the borders of North Korea still had 34 to 75 miles to go at varying points from west to east.

Time was becoming an increasingly important factor. Normally blanketing snows can be expected over North Korea about November 10.

The first snows have already fallen, obscuring roads and adding to the difficulties of fighting.

Some observers thought that if the Reds could prolong the campaign, only desultory patrols would be possible through the winter.

Winter temperatures drop as low as 40 degrees below zero.

On the northwestern front, besides stalling for winter, the Reds appeared determined to hold open the main escape routes north. It was Kusong which dominated those escape routes. The United States Fifth Regimental combat team killed an estimated 400 Reds and took 115 prisoners in battling to within 2 miles east of that town. Two prisoners were Chinese.

United States tanks knocked out two Red tanks on the eastern approaches of Kusong.

Allied warplanes were over the Kusong front all day. They claimed three artillery pieces and two self-propelled guns knocked out. A large Red troop concentration was strafed.

About 20 miles northeast of the American spearhead the South Korean Sixth and Eighth Divisions formed a new defense line running southeast to northwest of Ongjong, 45 miles south of the border.

One Regiment Wiped Out

The Sixth was "badly mauled," and its second regiment virtually wiped out before pulling back from a three-day fight with 10,000 Communist troops.

South Koreans reported Chinese Communist officers were leading the Korean Reds in the fighting.

The Sixth Division suffered the first major reverse in nearly seven weeks of fighting.

In the pullback, the Seventh Regiment of the Sixth Division withdrew from above Chosan on the Yalu River frontier to Sangpa, about 30 miles from the border.

The British Twenty-seventh Brigade repelled counterattacks by 500 Reds as it pushed slowly west toward Sinuiju, border city 50 miles away.

The South Korean First and Seventh Divisions, also in the northwet sector, reported they were meeting fierce Red attacks from the north and northwest of Unsan. The Reds were broken up by bayonet charges after throwing two battalions of possibly 1600 men at the South Koreans.

Chinese Troops Given Two Grenades by Reds

HAMHUNG, Korea, Oct. 29 (Delayed) (AP).—A captured Chinese soldier speaking through an interepreter, said today he was among a group rushed down from Manchuria, given two hand grenades each and told to fight "American imperialists."

Sixteen Chinese prisoners were brought to headquarters of the First ROK (Republic of Korea) Corps. Most of them claimed they formerly were Chinese Nationalist soldiers who were captured in China's civil war by the Communists.

They said the China Reds worked them on farms but recently reorganized them into the 492d Engineering Regiment. They hauled ammunition, six mortar shells to each man.

The prisoners said they were moved into North Korea about a week ago. The trip by train began from a small village east of Yonky in Manchuria. (The place specified in this dispatch probably is Yanki, a Manchurian rail point near the northeast frontier of Korea.)

The prisoners told of traveling mostly by night because of fear of American planes.

Peiping Radio Promises Aid For Koreans

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 30 (AP). The Peiping Communist radio today continued to broadcast a steady flow of promises of resistance against "American imperialist aggression" in Korea.

The "Chinese people are bound to support the just war of the oKrean people," Historian Kuo Mo Jo was quoted in a broadcast heard by the Associated Press in San Francisco.

"The Chinese people," said Kuo, "will not stand idly in the face of American imperialist aggression in Korea."

Kuo spoke at a Peiping rally for departing Chinese delegates to the "Second World Peace Congress" in England next month. Kuo is chief delegate.

Similar expressions issued simultaneously from other regions of Red China. In Suihua, Manchuria, railway workers were represented as saying:

"If American imperialists dare to bring flames of war to our borderlands, we will surely extinguish them."

A letter to Communist China's chairman Mao Tze-Tung and Military Commander Chu Teh from a group of combat veterans in Shantung Province was quoted in part:

"We will fight to any length to safeguard our sacred territory, liberate Formosa and Tibet, support the Korean people and the people's army, and we will defeat American aggression and safeguard world peace."

As before, such sentiments appeared to be carefully phrased to exclude any specific threat of open intervention in Korea.

Judge Frees Aliens Taken in Roundup

CHICAGO, Oct. 30 (AP).—A Federal district judge today released on bail three aliens jailed a week ago on orders of Attorney General McGrath.

Judge William J. Campbell ruled that McGrath's canceling of their liberty on bond during pending deportation proceedings was an abuse of the Attorney General's discretion under the Antisubversive Act passed this year by Congress.

The new law provides that aliens may be confined if their freedom endangers the Nation.

The three men ordered admitted to bail are Vincent Andrulis, 60, writer and former columnist for Vilnis, a Lithuanian language newspaper; Moses Resnikoff, 64, business manager of the Jewish daily Morning Freheit, and Carl Sklar, also known as James Albert Keller.

They have been accused by the Government in deportation proceedings of Communist activities.

Marcus T. Neelly, head of the immigration office in Chicago, said Sklar was a Communist organizer who worked among union members in the meat-packing industry.

Connection With Sklar Denied by CIO Union

By The Associated Press

The CIO United Packinghouse Workers Union said yesterday Carl Sklar, who was arrested in Chicago a week ago in a roundup of suspected subversive aliens, has never been on the union's payroll or held any position in the union.

An Associated Press story on October 23 erroneously identified Sklar as an organizer for the CIO union. Marcus T. Neely, head of the Chicago immigration office who announced the arrest, said Sklar was a Communist organizer who worked among union members in the meat packing industry.

Sklar, also known as James Albert Keller, won release on bail in Chicago yesterday along with two other aliens picked up in the roundup. They were among several score arrested under a provision of the new anti-subversive law giving the Attorney General power to jail aliens regarded as dangerous to national security.

Soon After Birth

Very Early Education In Sex Urged

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 30 (AP).—Parents were told today that "sex education needs to start soon after the baby arrives."

Addressing the American Public Health Association, Miss Helen Manley, health director of University City, Mo., public schools, asserted:

"Make no fuss over his (the baby's) taking off his clothes, handling genitals or such, but treat this as anything else he does. Children naturally explore their bodies. All functions of the body are new and interesting to him."

Declaring there is a need for "a straightforward look on one of the most powerful phases of human relations—namely, sex," Miss Manley said:

"Too often that word brings a hush and a feeling of rigidity and inhibition. Yet we are living in a biological world in which sex plays the leading role in creation, parenthood, love, marriage and all the very best things in life, and on the other hand it is involved in crime, disease, mental breakdowns and the worst phases of our civilization."

She urged parents to be concerned if their children don't ask questions about sex, because "he may have had his curiosity satisfied by nurse or playmate."

She declared that as the child advances through school grades, his questions about sex will become more definite and mature, and parents should be ready to answer them truthfully and simply.

Corning Proposes School A-Bomb Study

Method Secret

A-Explosions In Russia Can Be Noted

A substantial assurance that the United States is able to detect any future atomic explosion in Russia has been given by Gordon Dean, chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission.

In an interview copyrighted by the weekly news magazine, U. S. News and World Report and made public yesterday, Dean was asked if any device exists so that if Russia had another bomb detonation someone outside Russia could know about it.

Dean replied, "We are fairly happy about our ability to detect an explosion." He added, however, that how this is done is a top-secret matter, so he would not indicate that it was done by one device or another.

At a press conference last week, Dean led reporters to infer that since the original explosion in Russia, announced here on September 23, 1949, no further detonation had taken place.

Later in the week, President Truman told a news conference he knew of no additional atomic explosion in Russia.

In his magazine interview, Dean stated flatly that the United States was ahead of Russia in A-bomb manufacture. But, he said, "It would be foolish to minimize the Russian achievement."

Confirming previous declarations on the subject, Dean said the AEC still has not completed its determination as to the feasibility of making a successful hydrogen bomb.

Burglar Performs Before Street Crowd

BALTIMORE, Oct. 30 (AP).—A burglar worked for nearly half an hour to crack a safe at a food market last night.

You don't have to take the arresting officer's word for it. There were about 200 eye-witnesses.

It seems the yegg chose to work on the safe with hammer and chisel practically out in the open. There were several lights on inside the store and a full view into it through a large plate-glass window.

A large crowd collected to watch the show before the police forcibly removed the main performer.

'Absolute' Rest Ordered For Italian Red Leader

ROME, Oct. 30 (U.P.).—Palmiro Togliatti, Italian Communist leader, has been ordered to take an "absolute" rest, his party headquarters announced tonight.

It was indicated that his duties would be taken over by Pietro Secchiz, his right-hand man, who is regarded as more of a "direct-action" advocate. Togliatti broke a vertebra in his neck in a motor accident in August, his recovery has been slow.

Absentee Vote Deadline

Thursday is the last day for receiving absentee voteres' ballots for the coming election, Mrs. Mary Thompson, Arlington Central Registrar, said yesterday.

Lessons on what to do in case of atomic bomb attack will be added to the curriculum of District public and parochial schools, if the Board of Education approves.

School Superintendent Hobart M. Corning said yesterday he would submit a plan to the school board Wednesday calling for the appointment of a committee that will draw up a guide for use in the schools.

He said the proposed committee will include representatives of the parochial schools.

Engineer Commissioner Brig. Gen. Gordon Young suggested the public and parochial schools conduct a joint study, Dr. Corning said.

While scope of the project has not been determined, Dr. Corning said it was his thought that the guide not be limited to the conduct of students in school but contain information that would be of general value.

Claims Court Changes Day For Opinions

The United States Court of Claims henceforth will issue its opinions on Tuesday instead of Mondays, Chief Judge Marvin Jones announced yesterday.

The first Tuesday opinion day will be on November 7.

The action is the second by a Federal Court in the District following suggestions by The Washington Post that too many court opinions are announced on Mondays. The United States Court of Appeals here recently changed its opinion day from Monday to Thursday after considering The Post's suggestion.

Judge Jones said the members of his bench had considered for some time changing the court's monthly opinion day from Monday to some other day in order to avoid conflict with the Supreme Court.

Jones said that The Post's suggestions were "the final push" which brought the action.

The Post proposals stressed the point that the Supreme Court sometimes hands down a dozen or more opinions, many of great significance, on a single opinion day—normally a Monday. This has the effect of making it next to impossible for the newspapers to give full treatment to the opinions. The lower courts have suffered because their opinions have frequently been blanketed by the more important rulings of the highest court. The Court of Claims usually has two or three important decisions, from a news standpoint, each decision day.

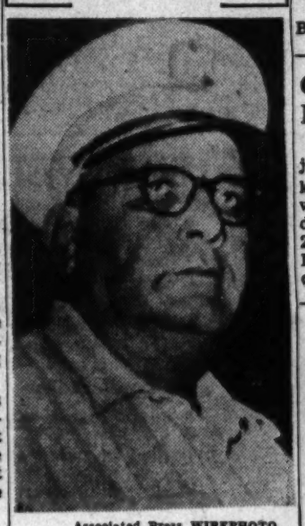
Exiled Syrian Revolt Leader Assassinated



Associated Press WIREPHOTO
GEN. SAMI HENNAWI
. . . Slain boarding streetcar

BEIRUT, Lebanon, Oct. 30 (AP). Gen. Hami Hennawi, leader of one of Syria's several short-lived military coups, was assassinated today as he boarded a streetcar in the center of Beirut.

The former commander in chief of Syria's army, who sent his predecessor before a firing squad when he seized control of the government last year, had survived several previous attacks on his life.

(The British-controlled Arab News Agency in Cairo said the assassin, a Syrian, has been arrested by Lebanon police. It quoted him as saying he slew the general to avenge the death of a relative, Syria's Prime Minister Mohsen Barazi, who died with President Husni Zayim before a firing squad after the Hennawi-led coup in Syria.

(The arrested man was identified as Mohammed Ibn Amed Barazi, 24. He was said to have traveled from his home in Hanma, Syria, to waylay his victim Hennawi.)

The slaying of Hennawi was another in the series of assassinations and revolt plots

Much of the trouble centers around the desire by some Syrians to join up with Jordan's King Abdullah to form a "greater Syria." This scheme is bitterly opposed by Saudi Arabia's powerful King Ibn Saud and leaders in other neighboring Arab countries.

The result has been that numerous Arabs from several of these countries have been rounded up from time to time and jailed for plotting to overthrow the Syrian government

Hennawi was deposed by Syrian troops under Col. Adib El Shishekly, who sent him to prison on charges of threatening Syria's independence.

Loans by World Bank Mount To Billion Dollars in 4 Years

With the granting of three loans yesterday to Thailand, the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development has now lent more than one billion dollars in its four years of life.

The exact total of the World Bank's loans is $1,017,200,000, of which 627 million dollars has been disbursed. Nineteen different nations are the borrowers.

The latest loans to Thailand, totalling $25,400,000, are the bank's first to pay any Southeast Asian country. They are for railroad rehabilitation, development of the port of the capital, Bangkok, and for irrigation, drainage and water communications in the central plains of the country.

McCarthy Lashes Out At Tydings Again

Mayor's Stand

Democratic Slate Backed By Daymude

Mayor G. Leonard Daymude of Kensington, who was treasurer of the George P. Mahoney for Governor Committee in the primaries, yesterday announced that he intends to support the Democratic ticket in Montgomery County next Tuesday.

Daymude, a plumbing and heating contractor and past president of the Washington Suburban Master Plumbers Association, made it clear that his decision was a personal one and did not bind any other members of the plumbers association. He pointed out that all of the Democratic candidates have gone on record as favoring election, rather than appointment, of the members of the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission.

The plumbers have been feuding with the sanitary commission for months over whether the commission or members of the association should install house connections for sewer and water. The plumbers have been active in seeking a change of the method of naming the commission now appointed by the Governor.

Meanwhile, two Republican candidates for the county council pledged "efficient and responsible government without regard to pressure groups of any kind" if a GOP county council is elected November 7.

Mrs. Kathryn J. Lawlor of Chevy Chase disputed Democratic claims that it made no difference that several commissions and boards involved in county administration are appointed by the Governor.

"The difference is that the county council must answer to the people of Montgomery County only, whereas the Governor can ignore the people of this county so long as he controls the State as a whole," she declared.

Both candidates declared the Republicans have taken a strong stand on zoning in contrast to "a wishy-washy" position by the Democrats.

Councilman Harold F. Hammond of Silver Spring, only member of the present county council seeking reelection, declared:

"We Republicans have taken a strong stand on zoning. We are opposed to commercial spot zoning and ribbon development and we would oppose any large-scale apartment rezoning—under present conditions."

Hammond explained that the reason the county council turned down the offer of the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission to turn over the trash and garbage collection to the council was that there "was a string attached. The county also would have had to take over the large deficit incurred in running this service," Hammond said.

Both candidates pledged that the county teachers would be placed on the full Teachers Association pay scale if the GOP wins.

Meanwhile the Board of Permanent Registration announced Montgomery County has 57,675 persons who are eligible to vote in the general elections November 7.

The total includes 37,868 registered as Democrats, 16,799 Republicans, 2996 who declined to affiliate with any party and 12 who belong to splinter parties.

In the general elections of November, 1948, there were 51,881 eligible to vote. These included 34,119 listed as Democrats, 14,873 Republicans, 2874 declined and 15 members of small parties.

Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (R., Wis.) last night jumped back into the Maryland Senatorial campaign with a new blast at U. S. Senator Millard E. Tydings (D., Md.)

McCarthy's third speech of the Maryland election season was delivered to a Republican rally in Washington's Hotel Statler. It was beamed to the Maryland electorate via radio stations WOL in Washington, WCBM in Baltimore and WDYK in Cumberland, and the Liberty radio network.

Tydings is seeking reelection to his fifth term and is opposed by John Marshall Butler, Baltimore attorney who is the Republican nominee.

McCarthy early this year authored charges that numbers of subversives were employed by the State Department. A Senate subcommittee headed by Tydings investigated and reported the McCarthy charges were a "hoax" and a "fraud." McCarthy called that a "whitewash" and Tydings called the whitewash charge "ridiculous."

Besides renewing charges that the Tydings' committee whitewashed the cases he presented, McCarthy last night called Secretary of State Acheson "the procurer of the pinks and punks in the State Department." He added that Acheson "must go."

McCarthy said the Administration amounted to a "Commiecrat Party." He said that if the Republicans were returned to control of Congress "you will see the greatest exodus from Washington of that motley crimson clique that this Nation has, or ever will see."

McCarthy said, "Each of the last three Democrat Presidents has had his war. The only wars fought in the last 50 years were under Democrat Presidents. Each Democrat President with his own war has taken a tremendous toll in the lives of our young men and in the substance of this nation."

One-Armed Man Severely Beaten in Robbery Attempt

Joseph Wilson Womble, 39, a one-armed laundry supply salesman, of 200 Maryland ave., Parkland, Md., was severely beaten in a robbery attempt early yesterday.

He was found in a dazed condition at Eastern ave. and Bunker Hill rd. about 3 a. m. by a park policeman and was admitted to Gallinger Hospital with head injuries and facial fractures.

Womble, who lost his left arm in a traffic accident several years ago, is the brother of Metropolitan Police Pvt. Harvey Womble of the Ninth Precinct, who is helping to investigate the case.

McKeldin Says Lane Welshed On Promises

CUMBERLAND, Md., Oct. 30 (AP).—Theodore R. McKeldin promised tonight if elected Governor to fulfill the promises he says Governor Lane didn't.

Generally, the Republican candidate called his Democratic opponent "the greatest promiser before election and the poorest performer after election of any Governor in the history of Maryland."

Specifically, he called attention in a prepared radio address to the Miner's Hospital and the State Teachers College in Frostburg.

"Four years ago, Mr. Lane, seeking your votes, promised additional bed space for Miner's Hospital," McKeldin said. "You know what happened to this promise, just like all the rest of Mr. Lane's promises . . .

"What Mr. Lane has failed to do, I can and will do promptly upon election. McKeldin said the Governor had promised but failed to provide additional space for the Frostburg State Teachers College.

Recalling widespread unemployment last year in Western Maryland, McKeldin said Governor Lane after "five months of inaction" proposed an appropriation to provide temporary relief. "But I know the people here, as elsewhere do not want relief or charity," declared McKeldin. "They want a fair opportunity to earn their own living."

McKeldin said as Governor he would "work toward ultimate elimination of the sales tax in progressive stages . . ."

Ritter Decisions Mitri

PARIS, Oct. 30 (AP).—Claude Ritter of France tonight scored an upset 10-round decision victory over Italy's Tiberio Mitri, former European middleweight champion, at the Palais Des Sports. Mitri outweighed his foe, 158½ to 157.

Sasscer, Carr Voice Plea for Increased Strength of U. S.

Rival congressional candidates told a Prince Georges County meeting last night that America must be kept strong.

Each advised his own election to advance this program.

The speakers were Representative Lansdale G. Sasscer, Democrat of Maryland, who is seeking reelection from the Fifth Maryland Congressional District, and his Republican opponent, Thomas S. Carr, of Annapolis.

Cites ECA Support

Sasscer cited his support of the Marshall Plan, the North Atlantic Pact and the Arms Air Program as key points and of his "stewardship of a busy congressional office."

"It's my firm belief that the greatest obligation of the Federal Congress is to promote peace and security by keeping our economy healthy, aggressive and sound," Representative Sasscer said.

Carr declared the Administration is leading the country down the road to socialism. He said that if he were elected, "I shall favor a strong and healthy military department."

He charged the Administration had spent billions on defense with little to show for it and added "it's time we stopped trying to knock out Russian tanks with surplus potatoes and surplus peanuts."

Held at College Park

The meeting was held in the University of Maryland Home Economics Building. About 150 persons were present. It was sponsored by the League of Women Voters, the Committee for Good Government, and the County Civic Federation.

Carr renewed his charge that crime and gambling are rampant in Prince Georges County, but he said he had the highest regard for Representative Sasscer's integrity.

Rival candidates for county offices and for the State Legislature also spoke to the group.

Harry W. McNamee, Democratic candidate for reelection to the county board of commissioners, said "the proof of what the Democratic Party stands for is its record of accomplishment."

School Program Praised

He said the record included a 14-million-dollar school program a recently inaugurated library and recreation program and a $1,200,000 addition to the county hospital, installation of voting machines and other improvements.

Daniel A. Abbott, Republican candidate for county commissioner, said "this election is not a party fight; it is a crusade for better government."

Abbott charged that the county is now in "a politically rotten mess." He said the Democratic "machine" has no platform while the Republicans offer a clear-cut program emphasizing reform of the county government plus "a complete and thorough investigation of corruption."

Perry O. Wilkinson, Democratic candidate for re-election to the House of Delegates, said the Democratic Party had done a tremendous job. John F. Lillard, jr., Republican candidate for the Maryland House, renewed charges that the Sothoron Bill was "smoke-screen legislation."

Senator L. Harold Sothoron, Democratic candidate for reelection to the State Senate and author of the recent law providing for revisions in county government, said the Democratic Party has "a noble record" of giving the people the kind of government they want.

Auto Output Is Seen Outstripping Safety

CHICAGO, Oct. 30 (AP).—Booming automobile production was given as one of the reasons for an 11 percent increase in traffic deaths in the first nine months of this year.

"The present traffic safety defense line in this country cannot cope with the production line," said Ned H. Dearborn, president of the National Safety Council.

The nine-month traffic death toll of 24,580 is 11 percent above that for the similar period of last year, the council said, and it looks as if the 1950 total will reach 35,000.

Dearborn observed that the number of deaths for every 100 million miles of travel has been reduced from about 12 in 1941 to approximately 7 this year.

The three leading cities for nine months in various population groups, ranked according to the number of traffic deaths for each 10,000 registered vehicles:

Over one million—Los Angeles, 3.2; Detroit, 3.2; Philadelphia, 4.1.

750,000 to one million—San Francisco, 2.3; Cleveland, 3.3; St. Louis, 3.6.

500,000 to 750,000—Minneapolis, 1.6; Milwaukee, 2.8; Buffalo, 3.0.

200,000 to 500,000—Syracuse, N. Y., 1.3; Providence, R. I., 1.7; Rochester, N. Y., 1.7.

100,000 to 200,000—Allentown, Pa., 0.4; Wichita, Kans., 0.6; Lincoln, Nebr., 0.8.

reprinted in the Paris edition of the New York Herald Tribune. A good many letters came in from readers. Most of them were from people who shared Meyer's view that Western Europe, beset by bad crops in 1946 and 1947, and other difficulties, had made a much better comeback and achieved a much greater degree of unity than was generally realized.

On his way back from Europe, aboard the French liner Liberte, Meyer picked up the radio telephone one day and called The Post to dictate an exclusive society item. His story was about another passenger, Perle Mesta, American Minister to Luxembourg and Washington's famous party-giver. He reported that Mrs. Mesta had starred as a guest at the captain's table and was the "personage" of the voyage.

Time magazine picked up the item and noted that the "alert shipboard correspondent" had been rewarded with a by-line: "Eugene Meyer, Post Reporter."

Memory of 1939

Talking about the current world situation yesterday, Meyer was reminded of an incident back in 1939, just after Hitler had invaded Poland to start World War II. He was having a conversation with a great German exile, who was very much worried.

"Do you think that Hitler's going to win?" asked the German exile.

"No," said Meyer.

"Why not?"

"Because I have confidence that the moral forces in the world will triumph over the immoral forces."

"What do you base it on?"

"Partly conviction, partly necessity. We have to believe that."

Feels the Same Way

Meyer said that this just about sums up the way he feels about the world situation today.

"Stalin's tactics are identical with Hitler's," he said. "It is that if lies are repeated often enough, they get to be accepted as truth.

"It's our job to get the truth out and smash the lies. I believe in the power of truth when it is adequately presented."

Turning to local affairs, Meyer said he felt that Washington, as the Capital of the greatest of all the powers, should be a model of good government. To be that, he said, the city ought to have local self-government as other communities do.

He pointed out that members of the Senate and House, who now govern the city, have neither the time nor the interest to do justice to local affairs.

No Time to Grow Old

Five years ago, on his seventieth birthday, Meyer was guest of honor at a testimonial dinner at the Statler, attended by 360 Government officials, civic leaders and old friends. President Truman on that occasion sent a congratulatory letter noting that he had so many and such active interests that he simply didn't have time to grow old.

Meyer will observe today's anniversary by spending most of the day at his desk.

In the evening there will be a family dinner at the Meyer home at 1624 Crescent pl. nw. Those attending, including the four daughters and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Meyer, will be Mrs. Florence Homolka, Mr. and Mrs. Pare Lorentz, Dr. Eugene Meyer 3d of Johns Hopkins University and Mrs. Meyer, Mr. and Mrs. Philip L. Graham and Miss Ruth Meyer.

Eight grandchildren will have a party earlier. They are Vincent Oscar and Laurence Edgar, children of Mrs. Homolka; Eugene Bradley, Ruth Emory and Anne, children of Dr. and Mrs. Meyer; and Elizabeth Morris, Donald Edward and William Welsh, the children of Mr. and Mrs. Graham.

Church Dogma Is Approved

Pope said he also wanted the opinion of the assembled cardinals and bishops.

"Is it your good pleasure, venerable brothers, that we proclaim and define as a dogma revealed by God, the bodily assumption of the blessed Virgin Mary into Heaven?" the pontiff asked in Latin.

The prelates rose one by one to answer "placet," it pleases, affirmative, or "non placet," negative. There was no announcement of the vote, but Vatican sources said it could be assumed it was unanimously affirmative, as indicated by the Pope's added words:

"We greatly rejoice that all of you, as with one thought and one voice, assent to that which we ourselves think fitting and desire; because by this admirable agreement of the cardinals and bishops with the Roman Pontiff there emerges still more clearly what the holy church believes, teaches and desires in this matter."

"Calumnies" Cited

The Pope expressed the hope that Mary would defend the Catholic Church, "which in not a few parts of the world is either little known or is charged with false accusations and calumnies, or oppressed by unjust persecutions; and may she lead back to the unity of the church all the erring and the wayward."

Thus, the pontiff repeated the hope previously expressed in his prayer and papal bull for Holy Year that non-Catholics would join or return to the Church.

Some Protestants, notably leaders of the Church of England, have protested that the pronouncement of the bodily assumption of Mary would be another impediment to Christian unity.

After the Pope proclaims the dogma, every Catholic must accept it without question or expose himself to the sin of heresy.

where Nationalists attacked the police station and exchanged fire with the police. Another came at nearby Penuelas, when a police party carrying out a search for hidden arms was ambushed by about 30 Nationalist rebels. Three Nationalists were killed there and five police were wounded before the police brought the situation under control.

A third outbreak erupted at Arecibo, northern coastal town 50 miles from San Juan, where Nationalists fired from a speeding car into a police jeep, killing a policeman and wounding others.

Six Nationalists Killed

In quick succession then, there were other outbreaks in towns in the central districts—at Jayuya, where the police station was bombed and the postoffice fired; at Utuado, where Nationalists set fire to the police station; at Arroyo, Naranjito and Quebradillas.

The shooting broke out in San Juan just before noon. At least six Nationalists were killed and several other persons, including two policemen, were wounded. Among the dead in front of the palace was Raimundo Diaz, whom the Nationalists call "Coronel" (colonel). One of the captured Nationalists said Raimundo Diaz gave him a gun and told him they were going to attack police at the palace entrance. The captive said that was all he was told and he had no knowledge of the other incidents throughout the country.

The Nationalist Party is led by Pedro Albizu Campos, its president. He served a sentence in the Federal penitentiary at Atlanta, Ga., from 1937 to 1943, for insurrection.

The 63-year-old extremist leader had been holding rallies throughout this island, whose two million people are United States citizens, urging them to declare themselves against the new constitution. He also denounced selective service.

Albizu founded his Nationalist Party in 1928. It went to the polls for the first time in 1932 and got 5000 votes. It chose not to vote in most of the elections, however, including the one held in 1948, when for the first time the Puerto Ricans elected their own governor.

Governor Munoz heads the Popular Democratic Party. Second in strength is the Statehood Party, which wants Puerto Rico to become the forty-ninth of the United States. Next is the Independence Party, which wants independence, but is not connected with the extremist Nationalists.

New Curbs on Credit Announced by Canada

OTTAWA, Oct. 30 (AP).—Canada clamped new restrictions on consumer credit today as an anti-inflation step.

Finance Minister Douglas Abbott announced that purchasers of automobiles would have to pay at least a third down, while purchasers of other goods on credit would have to pay 20 percent down, effective November 1. Installments must be paid up in 18 months. Previously, there was no down payment requirement nor any time limit for completion of payments.

Alaska Group To Hold 3-Day Meeting Here

Scientists concerned with Alaskan research will meet here for three days, beginning Thursday, November 9.

The Alaskan Science Conference, to be held at the National Academy of Sciences, is sponsored jointly by the academy and the National Research Council. Some 22 individual sessions are planned, with one public meeting at which Government officials will speak and special Alaskan films will be shown.

The public meeting is scheduled for 8:30 p. m., Friday, November 10, at the Department of Interior Auditorium.

Objectives of the conference, it was stated by conference officials, are to stimulate wider interest in research relating to the Alaskan area, and to make results of present research more widely known and available to scientists planning work in Alaska.

Royal Family Likes Film; Critics Bored

LONDON, Oct. 30 (AP).—King George VI, Queen Elizabeth and their daughters, Elizabeth and Margaret, tonight went to see "The Mudlark," a film about the King's great-grandmother, Queen Victoria. It was a controversial choice of this year's royal film performance.

Their majesties liked it, but at least one critic said it was a "bit of a bore." The Daily Express, which often harks back with a sigh to the salad days of Victoria, said dryly that Irene Dunne's Queen was a little too reverent.

Methods of Escaping Tax Payment Scored

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Labor and farmers, as well as business, must pay their shares of higher taxes and not try to pass them on in higher wages or higher prices, Roy Blough, one of President Truman's Economic Advisers said yesterday.

Otherwise, Blough told the annual Agriculture Department Outlook Conference, the increased taxation will not "perform successfully its anti-inflationary mission."

Blough admitted that to carry out his theory would go contrary to a widely adopted economic practices, such as:

1. Labor agreements, where wages are tied to the cost of living, including taxes. "Following this principle," he said "would mean that tax increases which apply directly to the worker would not be considered in wage negotiations, and that the effects of tax increases on prices would be excluded in computing the cost of living.

2. Agriculture's parity formulas, which tie the prices of farm products to the prices of what farmers buy, including taxes. Farm price pay for goods and services they supports are based on these parity formulas. At present any increase in taxes is immediately reflected in higher parity levels and higher price supports.

"In computing parity prices," Blough said, "increases in the prices of things which the former buys would not under this principle, include any price increases which reflect tax increases. Otherwise, the parity price formula would operate to protect farmers against tax increases . . ."

3. Prices of industrial products "would not be raised . . . because of increases in corporate or profits taxes." Otherwise, Blough declared, "business would escape the load intended for it, and other groups would be unfairly burdened.

"The purpose of a tax program," Blough said, "is to distribute the burden of taxes among the various taxpayers in a fair and economically sound manner.

"If any major economic group is able to escape the burden of the tax by securing a larger income, the intended burden distribution will be frustrated, and the tax does not achieve its anti-inflationary goal since it does not reduce spending.

"It is then necessary to increase the burden and reduce the spending of other economic groups. This is unfair, and necessitates an unnecessarily large total volume of taxation, intensifying all the problems which high taxes produce."

Brannan Hits Food Dumping; Says It Doesn't Make Sense

Agriculture Secretary Charles F. Brannan yesterday denounced the destruction of potatoes and other foods as "a useless drain upon our resources that just doesn't make sense."

Brannan's declaration was made in outlining agriculture's part in the mobilization program at the annual Outlook Conference of the Department. More than 750 agricultural experts from each State, plus five visitors from Canada, are attending.

"We must certainly search for some better device for support of perishable food products than those which take food away from the consumers and divert it to uneconomical and sometimes wasteful uses, such as we have witnessed with potatoes," Brannan said.

Brannan declared that "abundant production" is the "maximum contribution agriculture can provide to the Nation's mobilization."

"That means enough of the right kinds of food and other farm products to fill every need at reasonable prices," he declared. He then listed the goals of agriculture at this time as three-fold:

1. "We must produce enough to supply the 150 million who form the Nation's civilian population with all they want to eat and enough more to carry a safe margin in a strategic reserve. People consume more food per capita in periods of full employment and high purchasing power such as the defense effort will create," he said.

2. "We have the simultaneous obligation to feed the Nation's growing forces and feed them well."

3. "We must produce enough to back up the Nation's foreign policy by continuing to share our abundance to the fullest possible extent with friendly foreign countries in need of help."

Brannan criticized the present price support program, but declared that he was "not arguing the merits of the department's past recommendations," referring to the Brannan Plan.

"Limiting price support to certain so-called basic commodities is not the answer," he said. "We need the assurance of support for products like meat, milk and eggs. We know from experience these periods of high purchasing power bring increasing consumer demand for such perishables. We know, too, that production of these foods can contribute to conservation rather than depletion of soil resources.

"We want our abundance of such food to reach the family table where it is needed, not piled up in warehouses. Perishables that cannot be kept safely in reserve, as we have done successfully with the storable commodities.

"We need a different method of supporting perishables, even in normal times, but we need it all the more in times like the present."

Rich Program Marks Night In Mrs. Coolidge's Honor

By Paul Hume

Some people make it a generous custom to observe their birthdays by giving presents to others.

Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge has been doing this for years. October 30 is her anniversary day. On that date, the Coolidge Foundation of the Library of Congress always gives music for Mrs. Coolidge's friends, who gather to honor her and to enjoy her generosity.

Last night this happy custom coincided with the closing of the eleventh Festival of Chamber Music by the foundation. It is also, as Dr. Luther Evans, Librarian of Congress pointed out, the 150th birthday of the Library. And it is the twenty-fifth anniversary of the founding of the Coolidge endowment to the Library.

So notable an occasion brought out a rich program. In addition to remarks by Dr. Evans, Mrs. Coolidge told the cheering audience how the work of the foundation "has brought me an inspiration I had not previously known."

Artists of the evening were Jennie Tourel, Howard Mitchell, and members of the National Symphony. Tourel sang arias from Mozart's Idomeneo and the Marriage of Fiagaro in superlative vein. Her knowledge includes the rarest insight into the workings and beauties of Mozart. For a vocalist this is great praise.

In the evening's newly commissioned work, Tourel and Mitchell shared honors. It is a set of Five Fables by Italy's Gian Francesco Malipiero. The stories are those of the Raven and His Mother, the Serpent and Jupiter, the Swan and the Stork, the Rats, and the Wolf and the Crane.

Tourel's gifts for the sounds and meanings of words seemed to give the score more worth than it actually possesses.

Former Coolidge festivals were remembered in Stravinsky's Apollon Musagete and Aaron Copland's Appalachian Spring. Hans Kindler first conducted the Stravinsky ballet here in the 1928 festival. Copland's score, written for Martha Graham on order from the Coolidge Foundation, was also premiered in the Library.

Bookie's Errand Boy Tells of Police Deals

NEW YORK, Oct. 30 (U.P.).—A 22-year-old youth, who became an errand boy for a notorious bookmaker at the age of 14, told the amazing story today of how he took seven "stand-in" arrests for the bookie when he was a teen-aged dope addict.

Charles Tomack, a confessed holdup man bargaining for a light sentence, told his sordid story of juvenile delinquency to the Brooklyn grand jury investigating police graft and gambling.

He also told about the police connections of his bookie boss, "Miracle Mike" Hackmeyer, who has been arrested more than 50 times but has never served a day in jail. Tomack testified that Hackmeyer paid police from $2250 to $3250 a month.

Tomack also testified that he heard Hackmeyer say, "We don't have to worry. We've got the (police) inspector."

Tomack said Hackmeyer paid him $2 a day but did not reveal whether the bookmaker supplied him with narcotics.

Hackmeyer, who is free on $25,000 bail as a material witness, and 18 policemen ordered into court by Police Commissioner Thomas Murphy, listened intently as Tomack testified.

The serious, sallow-faced youth told the jury he ran errands, brought food and whisky while he was a student at James Madison High School.

Tomack said Hackmeyer met him in a barber shop one day and asked him if he would take a stand-in arrest.

One afternoon, he said, Hackmeyer talked to plainclothes officers for about 10 minutes and announced they had to make an arrest.

"Hackmeyer told me to get out a pad and write down the numbers he dictated to me," Tomack said. "He said this was going to be 'policy' arrest. He took the piece of paper off the pad and put it in the lapel pocket of my jacket. He got out of the car. Five minutes later two police officers came up to the car . . . and one of them went to my lapel pocket and took the paper out. They did not search me."

Tomack said the officers took him to a police station and that shortly after he was jailed a bondsman bailed him out. He pleaded guilty and received a suspended sentence.

Tomack offered to identify one of the officers who arrested him, but Judge Samuel Leibowitz said he did not think it would be fair to publicize any officers' names until they "have an opportunity to come forth and have their day in court."

After Tomack described his stand-in arrest, Judge Leibowitz ordered Hackmeyer and the policemen to leave the courtroom.

Then, in answer to the judge's questioning, Tomack revealed that two policemen retired from the force to become partners with bookmakers. One, a first grade detective, was hired by Hackmeyer, he said. Tomack said Hackmeyer netted between $2000 and $3000 a week.

Of the 18 policemen summoned to court to hear the youth's story, five have retired from the force. One, a lieutenant, turned in his retirement papers just before he went to court.

Corporation Tax Hike Backed Instead of a Profits Levy

NYHT News Service

Congressional tax experts are preparing to tell the House Ways and Means Committee that a moderate increase in the corporation income tax would be preferable to an excess profits tax as a means of raising revenue and curbing inflation.

This position also is likely to be taken by Treasury tax experts and recommended to the committee by the Secretary of the Treasury, John W. Snyder, when he appears at the opening of the committee's tax hearings November 15.

When Congress adjourned after passing the $4,700,000,000 increase in tax levies on both individual and corporate incomes the staff of the joint committee on internal revenue taxation was instructed to investigate the excess profits tax field.

At the same time Congress put the Treasury on notice to have its recommendation on excess profits taxes ready for the forthcoming "lame duck" session of Congress. The Revenue Act of 1950 made those points explicit in its provisions.

As far as can be learned, both Treasury and congressional tax experts think that the excess profits tax is economically unsound and contributory to inflation, while an increase in the corporate income tax would provide the revenue needed to defray the defense cost without upsetting the economy.

It now appears that the excess profits tax, which was the central issue of the revenue debates in the session of Congress which ended September 23, will be displaced by talk for a "war profits tax," in the November session.

Sponsors of the "war profits tax," particularly Secretary Snyder, think that the name carries the same political appeal as an "excess profits tax." They also believe that there is no sharp dividing line between fair or reasonable profits and unfair, abnormal profits.

If the excess profits tax formulas of World Wars I and II are used again, they contend, they will be an invitation for wasteful use of funds by taxed corporations, increasing production costs and a raising of prices paid for military supplies and civilian goods.

3 Die in Mine Blast

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., Oct. 30 (U.P.).—Three men were killed and one injured seriously in a gas explosion at the Glen Alden Coal Co.'s Avondale colliery today. The blast occurred shortly before 1 a. m. as the workers were driving a rock tunnel from the Red Ash to the Ross vein.

Swedes Cheer As Gustaf VI Takes Throne

STOCKHOLM, Oct. 30 (A.P.).—King Gustaf VI ascended the ancient throne of Sweden today and proclaimed as his royal motto, "Duty above all."

He pledged himself to adhere strictly to the constitution and to rule as a "righteous king and gracious father of the Swedish people by a legal, just and mild government."

The new king, 67, is the oldest ever to assume a European throne. His formal succession came this afternoon as he finished reading his royal oath in the cabinet council room of Stockholm palace.

Gustaf VI, looking pale and strained, hailed his father as the "peace king." Gustaf V, who died yesterday, had kept the country neutral during two world wars. His reign of nearly 43 years was the longest in Swedish history. At 92 he also was Europe's oldest reigning monarch.

Read by Socialist Premier

The King's oath was read by Socialist Premier Tage Erlander, in the presence of his cabinet and Sweden's hereditary princes. The premier formally offered his government's resignation and the King asked it to remain in office.

The King then turned to the royal princes, his son, Bertil, 38, and his brother, William, 66. The two pledged always to remain loyal and faithful to their "King, lord and master, Gustaf VI Adolf." The Premier then pledged the allegiance of his Cabinet to the King.

The new crown prince, curly-haired Carl Gustaf, was not required to pledge his allegiance. He is only 4 years old—the son of the new King's eldest son, Gustaf Adolf, killed in a 1947 airplane crash.

The solemn ceremony proceeded then to the dazzling hall of state. There the King's British-born wife, Queen Louise, members of the royal family and the court awaited. Queen Louise is the great-granddaughter of Britain's Queen Victoria and a sister of Earl Mountbatten.

The new King ascended his silver throne, which was covered by his ermine mantle. His jeweled crown and scepter were placed at the sides of the throne. High officials and military officers pledged their allegiance.

Great Ovation Received

After the resplendent but simple ceremonies, the King and his Queen received tumultuous ovations from the throngs outside. The couple stepped onto the palace balcony. A moment later, the King stepped back and returned with Prince Carl, dressed in white, in his arms. The cheers increased.

"Thank you for your love and loyalty to my beloved father," said the new monarch, addressing the crowd. "I assure you I will endeavor to follow in his footsteps to do everything for our dear country. Long live Sweden!"

The King, the Queen and the little Crown Prince were called back again and again.

The body of Gustaf V will lie in the chapel of Stockholm Palace in a closed coffin covered with the ermine mantle of the dead King.

After the funeral November 9, the body will be buried in Iddarholm Church, last resting place of most Swedish Kings. The dead King will lie by the side of his wife, Queen Victoria, who died 20 years ago.

United Nations Pays Tribute to Gustaf V

LAKE SUCCESS, Oct. 30 (A.P.).—The United Nations paid tribute today to King Gustav V and extended condolences to the Swedish people on the monarch's death.

Secretary General Trygve Lie said Gustav, during his 43-year reign, was "the living symbol of the democratic spirit of Sweden, and an inspiration not only to his own people but to the peoples of the world."

VA Clerk Hangs Self In Cellblock

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald yesterday issued a certificate of suicide in the death of Robert Leonard LaBarreare, 52, Veterans Administration clerk, who was found hanged in a cell block of the Eleventh Precinct Sunday night.

Police said both LaBarreare and his wife, Mildred, 41, a medical technician, both of 108 13th st. ne., were arrested about 9 p. m. in the 3600 block of S. Capitol st. on charges of being drunk.

LaBarreare was found dead in his cell about 11:15 p. m., one leg of his trousers tied around his neck and the other wrapped around a bar of the cell door. Station Clerk Pvt. V. C. Waller said he had checked the cells 15 minutes earlier, at which time LaBarreare was lying quietly on his bunk.

Mrs. LaBarreare was taken to the Women's Bureau, where she later forfeited $10 collateral on the drunk charge, police said.

Woman, 60, Is Accused As Bloomer Shoplifter

NEW YORK, Oct. 30 (U.P.).—A well-dressed 60-year-old woman was arraigned yesterday on charges of carting out merchandise from department stores by the bloomersful.

Mrs. Ann Bergner was held on $10,000 bail along with her son, Morris, 45. A second alleged accomplice, Ray Cole, 38, was held on $5000 bail.

Detectives said they followed Mrs. Bergner as she left a store with her bloomers full of shoplifted goods. They arrested her in a car, in which they said they discovered $4000 worth of merchandise.

Nurse Shortage Held Still Plaguing Nation's Hospitals

BALTIMORE, Oct. 30 (A.P.).—Dr. Edwin L. Crosby said today the nursing shortage still is one of the major problems of American hospitals, partly because there is a lack of national planning.

The Johns Hopkin Hospital director spoke at the tenth annual convention of the Maryland-District of Columbia-Delaware Hospital Association.

Crosby said the shortage of nurses was made "worse by the Korean emergency" and "aggravated" by lack of planning on the national level.

He told of plans proposed to relieve the shortage by:

1. Providing federal aid to nursing students.

2. Expanding the training of these students and of graduate nurses, nurses' aides and practical nurses.

3. Establishment of an agency to propose and assign nurses to armed forces or to civilian hospitals as part of defense planning.

The plan has been put forward by the American Hospital Association. Crosby is chairman of its professional practice council.

The agency proposed by the association would be set up by that group, the American Medical Association, the National Nursing Organizations and the National Security Resources Board.

Earlier today the meeting heard Dr. Charles S. Wilinsky say that Congress will be asked to restore $75,000 recently eliminated from Federal funds for hospital construction.

Wilinsky, president of the American Hospital Association, said the restoration would be sought when Congress reconvenes next month at the special call of President Truman.

Musical Veto

To the members and patrons of the Arlington Civic Symphony, the orchestra is a living thing which offers an opportunity both for enjoyment and for creative expression. To the executive board of Local 161 of the AFL Musicians Union, however, the volunteer symphony, composed of amateurs as well as professional musicians giving their services after hours, is apparently just another place of employment. Hence the unfortunate impasse over the position of the orchestra's unpaid, nonunion conductor, and the union prohibition against Local 161 members playing in the symphony so long as Mr. Bernard Rosenthal is its leader.

If there were a real issue of exploitation involved, or if Mr. Rosenthal were taking gainful employment away from somebody, the union objection would be understandable. But the situation in the Arlington Symphony is totally different. None of its 70 members is paid, and the most any conductor has received is an honorarium covering little more than expenses. Last year, after a succession of tryouts, Mr. Rosenthal was chosen overwhelmingly as the new conductor. The hitch is that Mr. Rosenthal is a chief musician in the Navy and thus cannot join the union. When he took the new volunteer post he agreed to serve the Arlington Symphony without remuneration of any kind.

What the union edict amounts to is a veto over the man chosen by the orchestra, including 15 union members, as the best man to lead it. The ban is especially unfortunate at a time when the symphony's series of eight concerts for children and four for adults is arousing real community interest. Whatever the technical justification for the union attitude, Local 161 has an opportunity for a magnanimous gesture by halting this sort of petty obstructionism before it destroys the orchestra.

Gustaf V

For 43 years Gustaf V reigned over Sweden with a skill and moderation which endeared him to the Swedes and gained for him the respect of the civilized world. The Swedish sovereign has much the same powers as his British counterpart, perhaps more, for there are constitutional rights back of kingly influence in Sweden in the domains of foreign affairs and national defense. That Gustaf exercised his authority to the full is undoubted. He did so with the concurrence of the people of Sweden, though this was as much a tribute to the man as to his august office. Gustaf V combined within himself the role of elder statesman as well as that of monarch. He was weather vane as well as leader, reflecting within himself and then expressing the predominant desires of the people of Sweden.

Like the people, Gustaf, though his orientation was more Germanic than British, insisted upon staying out of the First World War. The situation was pretty rough going, but Swedish neutrality was maintained unimpaired. A greater test of noninvolvement came in 1939, starting with the outbreak of war in Finland, when the Muscovites fell upon the Finns. The Swedes love the Finns with almost parental affection; for the Muscovites they entertain nothing but fear and detestation. There was a strong "activist" movement in Sweden that would have taken sides with the beleaguered Finns, but the King's hand at the helm never faltered, and he restrained the partisans. At the same time he encouraged the great stream of aid which poured into Finland. When the war ended, with Sweden playing a central part in the peace-making, the Swedes ran into their greatest difficulty, when Hitler invaded Norway. Here again it was impossible to stay "neutral in thought," and Sweden became a haven for refugees, playing a role in this respect which offset the entanglement she was constrained to incur when the Germans got transit rights through Swedish territory. Again the Swedes stayed out of war, thanks in great part to a miracle of steersmanship as well as the authority of Gustaf V.

However, Sweden never did achieve the absolute neutrality of Switzerland. This was due to a number of reasons, one being the difference in geographical location, and these persuaded the Swedes after the war to take part in conversations aimed at the setting up of a Scandinavian alliance. The move was nipped in the bud by Norway's desire to be associated with the Atlantic Alliance, yet, though the grouping is a thing of the past, nothing can disturb the identity of interest of the Scandinavians, and an informal understanding is implicit in the situation. It could not be otherwise. Aside from the Atlantic Alliance, which includes Denmark and Norway, there is the Russian activity in trying to Russianize the whole of the Baltic Sea. It is thus a critical period for the new King, Gustaf Adolf, who, however, is a true son of his father, and recognized as such through Sweden. Sixty-seven years of age, he has had a ripe experience in public life, with the same rigid sense of duty and the same lack of ostentation which distinguished Gustaf V. He is more of a scholar than his father, less given to the diversions which made Mr. G. newsworthy as a tennis enthusiast, less marked in his convictions, and just as worthy of a dynasty which is wedded into the fabric of Swedish life.

Roof Of The World

Tibet is a monk-ridden and self-sufficient theocracy seven times the size of Great Britain. It has little to stop an organized force except its precipitous passes and its location on the world's bleak and uninviting roof. Hitherto, however, the Tibetans have not been content with their geographical isolation as a safeguard of their national integrity. They are adept at playing the great powers one off against the other—specifically Russia, Britain, and China. But at present this resource is denied to them by the disappearance of Britain as a great power in middle Asia and by the alliance between Russia and China.

For a century all three powers have been at odds over the issue of who shall exercise paramountcy over this buffer state. Formally the Chinese have the best case, for a kind of dependence upon China has ruled the relations between the two countries, theoretically if not always practically, for close upon four millenniums. Till the end of the Chinese monarchy in 1911 the status of Tibet was that of a tributary. Since then Republican China has been the recognized suzerain power. Indeed, the national flag of China is five-barred in honor of Chinese, Manchu, Mongol, Mohammedan—and Tibetan. Why Communist China has moved against Tibet in the present overt fashion can only be surmised. It may be only for reasons of prestige, for China already has lost Outer Mongolia to the Russians, and has lost some "face" over the failure to take over Formosa. As to the value of such an acquisition, this is bound to be reaped more in influence in Asia than in substance, for the bare and barren country has little to offer the teeming land of Mao Tze-tung.

The accrual of prestige to Mao Tze-tung is the reason that the most disconcerted of the onlookers of events in Tibet is the Indian government. There is a subterranean rivalry between Pandit Nehru and Mao Tze-tung for the inspiration of the new Asia, which, having more or less thrown off its colonial yoke, is in the birthpangs of the power politics hitherto monopolized by the Western world. India recognized Communist China in great part out of fear over Chinese intentions toward Tibet, which stretches 2000 miles along the Indian continental frontier. Most of the Indian diplomacy in Peking has been devoted to the job of persuading the Chinese to keep hands off. This diplomacy has been reinforced by active efforts in New Delhi itself to bring the Tibetans and the Chinese together over the maintenance of the status quo—autonomy under Chinese suzerainty.

It now looks as if Peking has spurned India's good offices, and intends to absorb Tibet either by fiat or by force. Why should India worry about secluded Tibet? Partly for the same reason that animated the British Raj—that any foreign power located on the highlands of Tibet would be an overhanging menace to India, psychologically as well as physically.

Strategically there could be no better platform in the world for air operations fanning out to all parts of the land mass of Asia. Here is what the geopoliticians would call a true "heartland." But this is a far off consideration. For the moment the influence factor is uppermost. The priestly country, which has no counterpart anywhere in the world, is the shrine of millions of Buddhists, and Buddhists number a third of the human race, mainly Indians. They would be impressed by a demonstration of Chinese strength in the land of the lamas. So would the Communists in Asia. Already most of the ideological Communists in Asia are looking more and more to Peking instead of Moscow. Nothing in Asia as elsewhere succeeds like success, and the absorption of Tibet would add to the force of Mao Tze-tung's attraction. This struggle for power is beyond the West's present concerns, but there is the stuff of great history in it.

Terrified Terrorists

When he told the Russian and Soviet satellite delegations at Lake Success last Saturday that they were behaving like men in an acute and morbid state of fright, Senator Lodge certainly put his finger upon one reason for the present highly combustible condition of world affairs. Whether his words actually applied to Mr. Vishinsky, to whom they were addressed, is somewhat doubtful, and in any event rather beside the point. Mr. Vishinsky has been around a bit and probably believes just about as much of his own speeches about the sinister purposes of the capitalist warmongers as he believed about the great Bucharinite and Trotskyite conspiracies that he prosecuted at the famous purge trials of the 1930s. He is a careerist who knows that his job depends upon his ability to say what his masters expect him to say.

But that the men in the Kremlin actually believe a good part of their own propaganda is almost obvious. Everyone who has had experience of the Communist mentality knows that there are no intellectual acrobatics too difficult for the true believer. But why should he wish to believe that the total destruction of Soviet Russia is the settled purpose of the United States and of the bourgeois nations generally? For one thing, because the Marxist-Leninist dialectic says that this ought to be the purpose. It does not matter, of course, that the dialectic has been again and again proved wrong, that the evolution of history since 1848 has pretty much ignored the laws of historical materialism, the most conspicuous example being the October Revolution of 1917. Wherever the facts and the dialectic are in conflict, the true believer must assume that the facts are wrong.

We must also remember that the whole organization of Soviet society devolves from the assumption that the capitalist powers will seek to destroy it by every means possible, including war. It is on this ground that the "withering away of the state" has been conveniently postponed to a dim and indefinite future. Meanwhile, the fear of attack has become in itself a vested interest within the Soviet state. It is the dialectical justification of the enormous armies, of the ubiquitous and tyrannical secret police, of the vast slave labor industry. The Soviet leaders, indeed, are in a position where, if the danger of an attack does not exist, such a danger must be invented.

It is the same psychology that disposes the Soviet leaders to interpret the purposes of other governments in terms of their own. Senator Lodge cited for example the habit of the East European delegates to quote statements in newspaper clippings and magazine articles as though they were accurate interpretations of government policy, and to pretend that American newspapers stand in the same relation to the State Department or the White House as Pravda and Izvestia to the Politburo. Similarly, Mr. Vishinsky spoke of the extravagant and irresponsible statements by a Southern educator and a Midwestern Congressman as though they were formal diplomatic pronouncements.

Thus in a sense Senator Lodge, in appealing to the Communist delegates not to be afraid of the phantoms created by their own sick imaginations, was, alas, so far as the Soviet leaders are concerned, merely talking up a rainspout. But he was in fact appealing beyond the leaders to the oppressed Russian people, and there his words may fall upon more receptive ears—if those ears can be reached.

How To Get Reserves

The increasing concern shown by military authorities over the anomalous status of the National Guard and organized reserves is both prudent and timely. Secretary Marshall, in his talk before the National Guard Association, barely scratched the surface when he alluded to the need for a Guard of greater strength and quality. At the same time he has recognized the practical problem involved in keeping reserve components on involuntary duty after the Korean war ends in his order to release reservists when they are fully trained. Another part of the same order, directing the military services to weed out reservists who for one reason or another are not available for duty, is in line with what Chairman Vinson of the House Armed Services Committee has called for.

The fact that the reserve components are in a state of disarray is not, however, the fault of individual reservists and National Guardsmen. If the fault can be placed, it lies in the general failure to anticipate the kind of emergency for which they would be needed. Most reservists, for example, would not grumble if there were a full emergency demanding their assistance. The difficulty arises from a limited emergency in which the calls to active duty fall inequitably; and the danger of disspiriting the reserves is all too apparent.

Yet the country needs reserve forces available in any kind of emergency. As General Marshall said, "We never can have a strong standing Army"—strong enough, that is, to meet every contingency. On this point it is becoming increasingly evident that the proposals in the Gray report of two years ago made sense. That report, never acted upon, called for federalization of the National Guard and the consolidation of both Guard and reserves into one organized component.

A good deal of criticism has arisen over the so-called "cannibalizing" of the Guard during the Korean crisis. This tendency to use Guard units called to duty as filler pools rather than as organizational entities reflects a lack of confidence in Guard training. For this the armed forces themselves are as much responsible as the Guard. But so long as the dual system of reserves exists, there will be squabbles for funds that impair training, such as have occurred in the Air Force. Moreover, the question of what Guard units to mobilize, especially in a limited emergency, is more a political than a military problem. That problem will remain so long as the Guard is organized on a State basis.

The solution, as we see it, is two-fold. First, a single reserve component must be created. Perhaps this might be divided into two categories, one made up of active reservists ready to serve whenever needed, the other of those men who would be available in time of war. Secondly, and more fundamental, there must be a constant flow of men into the reserves. This is possible only through a universal service law which would incorporate the present selective service principle along with a mandatory period of service to the Government for civilians exempted from military duty. The creation of a trained military reserve would be a prime purpose of such a law. Not the least of its advantages would be that it would bring into the reserves younger men not likely to have family responsibilities.

"Subversive" Wives

Most Americans have read, or at least heard of, the new law on immigration, recently passed by the Eighty-first Congress (the McCarran law). It is evident from reading newspaper and magazine articles that this law has stirred up quite a bit of controversy in the United States. Many of the American personnel stationed in foreign countries, such, as in our case, Austria, are particularly affected by this law.

We realize fully that this law was passed with the best intentions and is, in part, necessary. However, we do feel the law, in its present form, is somewhat drastic, and should be amended, in part.

Many American personnel stationed overseas are married to, or attempting to marry, foreign nationals who would be considered subversive or undesirable under the new law. In reality most, we cannot say all, of these nationals were victims of circumstance.

To cite an instance, those girls of the Germanic nations, who belonged to the "Bund Deutcher Madchen," which admittedly was affiliated with the Hitler Youth Movement, are considered undesirable under the present law. However, it should be realized that those persons who were ruled by Hitler were forced, generally speaking, to belong to Nazi organizations of one type or another. It must also be remembered that these young women, at the time they belonged to the above-named organization, were young children, who know little of, or nothing at all, of what was actually going on in the world at that time.

We hope sincerely that the law will be amended to a degree where we are permitted to bring our wives and brides-to-be, home, to become American citizens, without their being held subversive for activities which were beyond their control.

"Pinpointing Crime"

The October 25 editorial on crime reporting was, I believe, well intentioned and objective reporting. I am sure that the citizens of Washington agree with you on the merits of scientific detecting. I personally fail to see any merit in knowing just what population group commits what portion of the Districts crimes. The harm done by stating that 80 percent of the major criminal arrests are Negroes, greatly overshadows the merits of vital statistics. This information tends to cause accusing fingers and glances directed at every Negro in public places, and gives the impression that 80 percent of the Negroes in this community are criminals.

Crime statistics as you implied should be made available to social workers, investigators, and interested civic groups. These people are certainly concerned about the racial ratios of crime for a varied number of reasons, depending upon their particular position in the community.

Your paper has done more than its share in bringing to the attention of the public some of the underfying reasons for the high crime rate of the Negroes in Washington. Past editions have outlined the sordid squalor and demoralizing atmosphere of the areas surrounding No. 2 Precinct. The danger is that the public may take but scant notice of these conditions, and all that may remain in their minds is the fact that the majority of crimes committed in the District are committed by Negroes. The Negroes who dominate the crime picture are the minority within a minority.

Arlington School Costs

There are several practical solutions to Howard Massey's dilemma, as expressed in his letter of October 21, over whether to vote for Arlington's school bonds. First, he should remove the Green eye shade through which he quite apparently has been viewing use of past bond money, and take an honest look.

He will find nothing to support his charge that the school board has "wasted 25 to 30 percent" of the money. He will find that the board obtained not less than seven bids on each project, and let the contract to the lowest bidder in every case. He will find that our new schools have cost substantially less than those built in the same period in Richmond, Lynchburg, Charlottesville, Alexandria, Washington and Baltimore.

If this does not convince him that the board has the "connection," "the inclination" and "the experience" to spend money wisely, he should become acquainted with three men employed to supervise and direct the school building program. They are R. E. Mueller, J. A. Smith, and L. A. Hodgson, all men over 50 who are construction specialists because they have spent their lives in the business.

Finally, on Mr. Massey's charge that the school board has failed to give the people "an accounting": does he really not know that they have been anxious from the first to supply facts on building costs to any interested citizen? As various building or additions have been completed, open houses have been held where all costs figures have been readily supplied. Board members have always been eager to talk to the public about what was going on, and in the last month, particularly, have exhausted themselves by speaking before P-TA and other civic groups, showing pictures of new buildings and answering all questions. A construction report has also been published, and is available to all.

If Mr. Massey will get the facts, confidence will follow—and his affirmative, assured vote for the bond issue.

Remedial Efforts In The Philippines

Regarding your illuminating editorial of October 24, "Suppressed Report," allow me to commend to your attention certain essential facts:

President Quirino's suspension of the privilege of the writ of habeas corpus in the Philippines is not a sweeping action calculated to strike at the hard core of civil liberties. As you very aptly put it, "the Quirino regime is fearful that agitators may cause an uprising, (and) that is no idle fear." The imminence of the danger which the Quirino administration seeks to guard against is abundantly shown by recent developments in the Hukbalahap situation, the most recent of which are the arrest of more than 100 Hukbalahaps in the city of Manila and the discovery of a secret plan for the recruiting and training of a Communist-indoctrinated army to overthrow the Philippine government.

The suspension is of a limited scope, applicable only to persons charged with insurrection and sedition. What may appear at first blush as a sweeping measure is, in effect, a remedial step specially designed to meet a particular threat to constituted authority. Except for the specific cases covered by the suspension, the writ of habeas corpus, along with other constitutional processes, is unimpaired.

While there have been instances of graft and corruption in the government, it is undeniable that, in the main, President Quirino fell heir to the scandals which you and other friends of the Philippines in the United States lament. It must be acknowledged in fairness that he has set in motion the necessary processes for the investigation and prosecution of such cases of graft and corruption.

Persons involved in these scandals are not, unfortunately, all subject to suspension and ouster by the President. Where they happen to be holding elective positions, he cannot, under our constitutional system, oust them. But the Philippine Congress has dealt firmly with erring members, as shown by the ouster of a former Senate President and the investigation by a special House committee of the alleged complicity of some legislators in the immigration scandal. The "slowness" of these processes, which has caused understandable and well-meaning impatience among our friends abroad, is inherent in the democratic way.

One of the criticisms consistently leveled abroad against the Philippine government is that it has engaged in "extravagant spending." What is represented as extravagance is nothing but a huge increase in government expenditures, which has been due to a number of unavoidable reasons, notably the assumption of added responsibilities attendant to independence; a vast expansion of social services such as education, public health, unemployment relief, retirement pensions and benefits for government personnel; veterans' pensions and benefits, etc.

Our critics make such of the features of emergency financing that have characterized our public finance since we assumed independence four years ago. It would be well for them to bear in mind that these emergency measures have been brought about by a confluence of forces beyond our control, the most important of which are the utter havoc wrought by the Japanese occupation and the universal inflationary situation produced by the last war. Our 1950-51 budget would pare expenditures down to the bare essentials of public administration, without impairing vital services.

Far from being "negligent in the collection of taxes," the Quirino administration has instituted a vigorou. tax program, which looks not only to higher and more equita'le rates of taxation but also to the speedy collection of taxes. But the prosecution of this necessarily complex program takes time. Relevant records have to be reconstructed, properties subject to taxation have to be reappraised, and a campaign, requiring in many instances a house-to-house canvass, has to be undertaken.

In an objective appraisal of our ability to cope with the "appalling fiscal crisis" with which our government is faced one must take into account that the level of income in the Philippines today is high. The fact that there has been a considerable increase in our dollar transfers from the Philippines—from $240 million to $324 million as of today—should speak well of the resiliency of our economy and the wisdom of our economic planning.

Our friends in the United States should be impressed with the fact that, as an American editorial writer said recently: "The Philippine government is in a shaky position, not because of any failure of the democratic process, but because of an economic imbalance resulting from war, occupation, and the uncoordinated way in which American help has been given thus far. These troubles can be remedied if we will act more quickly. The longer-range problems can satisfactorily be solved through Philippine resources, Filipino skills and the sympathetic cooperation of the United States."

California Intervention

What have Vice President Barkley, Attorney General McGrath, Secretary of Labor Tobin, Secretary of Agriculture Brannan, Secretary of Interior Chapman, W. Averell Harriman, assistant to the President on foreign affairs, been doing in California opposing Candidate Nixon? Whose money paid for their trips? Is it the taxpayers'? If so, I think it is outrage, and highly indecent. I don't want a dollar of my money used for this purpose by Federal officeholders. KENT GODFREY.

India's Health Challenge

By Marquis Childs

Life In A Village

AGRA, India—As tourists have done since time immemorial, I stood watching the rising moon convert the Taj Mahal from ghostly white to silver. All the descriptive adjectives applied through the centuries fail to convey the triumph of this great monument of the Mogul Empire.

Four hundred years have passed since it was built. Yet it is as pure, as gleaming white, as perfect, as on the day that the last piece of carved marble was put in place around the sarcophagus of the queen it was designed to honor.

For one driving along the roads and through the villages of present day India, the Taj Mahal must seem a kind of historical accident; a miracle set down almost irrelevantly in a dry and wasted land. Even the briefest glimpse of an Indian village startles the Westerner who sees it for the first time.

The mud huts are open to the twisted path leading off from the road. They contain a few cooking pots, perhaps one or two of the simplest religious objects, and, almost literally, nothing else. Nothing, that is, except people who lie down in ranks on the floor after dusk comes. The hot, dry air is filled with dust as fine as smoke and with the noise of people and animals.

IT IS the commingling of human beings and animals on close terms that seems to the Westerner so contrary to the way people should live. Here is a village pond of stagnant water covered with a thick green scum. In the center of the pond are water buffalo, only their nostrils and their horns visible on the surface of the water. These are domesticated animals that are said to produce more milk than the cows.

At one end of the pool some boys are ducking themselves. Nearby men and women are washing clothes in this green water. And a few steps away at the well, drinking water is being drawn by village women who have come with jars on their heads.

Around the side of the pond are monkeys and the weird-looking animal that passes for a pig in India. It actually looks like a kind of doll's hammock slung along a pole which is the animal's backbone. The amount of useful meat on this bloated creature must be very small.

The monkeys, like the cows, are sacred and cannot be killed. They run in droves under the trees, fierce-looking old males, mothers with small babies clutching them. I watched a big monkey molesting two women by the edge of the pond, chattering, threatening to bite them. Finally in exasperation one of the women picked up a stone as though to throw it. The monkey was so startled by this totally unexpected manifestation of ill will that it ran up a nearby tree.

Seeing the villages, you understand more about Gandhi and his approach to reform—the return of the peasant to handicrafts, to cleanliness, to abstinence from the liquid dynamite brewed in the home called toddy, all this through the slow process of education. It would seem difficult or impossible to move these people in any short period of time into the machine age.

IN NEW DELHI I talked with the Minister of Health, Rajkumari Amrit Kaur, one of Gandhi's closest associates, herself born into a princely household. She told how they had gone into one of the poorest of these villages to live and had done the work of the untouchables, such as sweeping the streets and doing the scavenging every morning.

What this meant for Gandhi, himself a rich and successful lawyer, is hard to convey in American terms since we do not have the same gap between top and bottom. Something like it would be for a partner in a rich Wall Street firm to give up most of his possessions, put on a pair of coveralls (as the equivalent of Gandhi's diaper) and go to live in the Negro quarter of one of the poorest towns in Mississippi.

It was complete abnegation and sacrifice. Gandhi felt it was supremely important to set an example of simple living, yet good living. Now the Minister of Health, who speaks of Gandhi as a living presence, is wrestling with the problem of the villages on a vast and far more difficult scale. She gives the statistics—an infant mortality rate of 161 per thousand (as compared with New Zealand's 20 or 21), a half million dying every year from tuberculosis, 2½ million contracting it. And on top of everything else are eight million refugees from Pakistan whose health Rajkumari must worry about.

There is one fact that can scarcely help but impress the visitor seeing the villages for the first time. That is their very survival; the survival of a people who have lived for so long in defiance of all the known rules of sanitation. In that, too, is a kind of triumph.

12½ Million West Germans Found Living on State Grants

(This is the second in a series of five articles on conditions in Western Germany. The author has just returned from a journey to Bonn, Berlin, Munich, Dusseldorf and other population centers, where she interviewed political leaders, industrialists, social workers and labor leaders to gain an insight into German views on economic conditions, European defense and resistance to communism. The third article in this series will be published Wednesday.)

By Agnes E. Meyer
Post Reporter

The Institute of Economic Research in Berlin estimated early this year that 12½ million West Germans are living on some form of relief, pension or insurance. The amounts the relief cases receive, $11 per month per individual and $18 per month for a couple, is commonly described as too little to live and too much to die.

This figure of 12½ million dependents is supported by a force of 13½ million employed workers which has lately risen to over 14 millions. Thus almost every worker supports not only his own family but also another unemployed or unemployable individual and his dependents.

The mass of the German people have become proletarianized in the sense that they, workers and intellectuals alike, live on a bare subsistence wage which makes it almost impossible for them to save and work their way up in the world. As a result we have spent vast sums helping the German government carry the relief load and supplementing inadequate salaries.

The whole social picture can be seen in all its dark seriousness if we consider that this low-pay and high-priced economy is extending itself to solve the hopeless task of assimilating nine million refugees and expellees from former German territory and from the Sudetenland. Of a Federal budget of 13 billion marks, 2.6 billions, or a fifth of the total, go exclusively to the solution of the refugee problem.

In addition the pensions for war widows, disabled veterans and other war casualties are three billion marks.

In fact, the whole relief and pension problem in Germany is such an outmoded tangle that it needs to be reorganized in order to reduce the cost of administration.

Yet this appalling economic and social picture is so much brighter than the bleak starvation years before the currency reform in 1948 that Vice Chancellor Bluecher and Minister of Economy Ehrhardt think the workers should be "zufrieden," which means they should keep quiet and be glad they are alive. The workers are quiet but they themselves call it the lull before the storm.

Gannett Breaks With Dewey

withdraw in favor of Dewey and run for the United States Senate instead.

Said He Could Clean Up Debts

Hanley wrote that "If I will consent to take the nomination to the United States Senate, I am definitely assured of being able to clean up my financial obligations within 90 days." He said he would repay Macy and Gannett "within a reasonable time."

After publication of the letter this month, Gannett said he had lent Hanley $19,000 for preconvention expenses. The publisher also told a reporter he thought there should be a grand jury investigation of circumstances surrounding the Dewey and Hanley nominations.

A Senate Election Committee had announced it will look into the matter, on the basis of a complaint by the American Labor Party.

The ALP and the Democrats charge that Hanley was "bought off" when Dewey changed his mind about retiring to private law practice and decided to seek reelection. They claim "Wall Street bankers" were behind the move.

Gannett said his statement was prompted by a "certain radio commentator," adding that this commentator, whom he did not identify, had said "that I am going to 'order' all the newspapers in our group to support Lynch for governor. This, of course, is absolutely not true. It is a lie."

Drew Pearson declared tonight he said on his broadcast last night.

"Rochester, N. Y.—Mrs. Frank Gannett and Chief Editor Paul Miller have been trying to prevent Publisher Gannett, Republican, from coming out against Gov. Dewey. They even isolated Gannett outside Rochester away from the telephone. However, Gannett plans to publish a statement in all his Republican newspapers next week vigorously opposing Dewey."

After today's comments by Gannett, Pearson said in a statement:

"My statement on the radio last night appears to have been substantiated 100 percent by Mr. Gannett with his statement today opposing Dewey."

Gannett's statement added:

"Because of his socialistic record in Congress and his support of new deal and so-called fair deal measures, I could not possibly support Congressman Lynch or vote for him. Beyond that, as is generally known, our newspapers have local autonomy and our editors express their own opinions without ever getting any orders from me."

The President's Calling List

President Truman yesterday had the following White House appointments.

11 a. m.—Lieut. Gen. Geoffrey Keyes, with General Collins, Army Chief of Staff.

Brehm Counters 'Kickback' Suit

LANCASTER, Ohio, Oct. 30 (AP). Rep. Walter E. Brehm (R., Ohio) today asked $5000 damages and dismissal of a suit charging he took kickbacks from a clerk in his Washington office for about three years.

The Congressman seeking reelection to a fifth term in the 11th Ohio District denied the charges of violating the Corrupt Practices Act in an answer and cross-petition in Fairfield County Common Pleas Court.

Mrs. Clara Soliday, 75, Logan, last Tuesday sued for recovery of $7340 in salary she said was withheld from her while she was Brehm's clerk from January 10, 1945, to January 31, 1948. She also asked $10,000 "punitive damages."

Brehm's cross-petition said Mrs. Soliday made her charges for "political purposes." He said she caused her charges to be published "maliciously and falsely" in the Twin City News, Baltimore weekly, and the Time-Recorder, Zanesville daily, and other newspapers.

Brehm said publication of the charges was designed to bring him into "public scandal, infamy and disrepute" among his constituents and others.

Because the charges caused him to spend substantial sums to vindicate himself, Brehm said he should have $5000 damages.

Ohio Taft-Ferguson Fight Seen Key to Future of GOP

Book." Taft shouts that it's "packed with lies and misrepresentation."

The labor attack, which originally pin-pointed the Senator's Taft-Hartley stand, has shifted in recent weeks to Taft's alleged "isolationist obstruction" of foreign policy and welfare measures.

As labor backs away from the T-H issue, Taft diligently revives it, alleging the issue has backfired in Ohio.

He tries to pin a Red tag on the CIO Political Action Committee, which he claims is really stage-managing Ferguson's show. The labor league rejoins with broadsides saying Taft voted identically with Vito Marcantonio on nearly all foreign policy issues.

Despite the war's bright turn in Korea, Taft continues to hit Administration policies in the Far East, claims Korea would have been averted had China been kept out of Communist hands.

But mainly Taft bangs away at his old theme of the trend toward centralization of power and "socialization" in Washington. He tells farm and city crowds that election of five more "labor Senators" and 15 more "labor Representatives" would flash the green light for a socialistic program.

Republicans picture Ferguson as "Captive Joe," a nobody without a program of his own, who dares not face Taft in debate. Taft charges everywhere that the CIO-PAC "completely controls my opponent, telling him what to say and where to go."

But Ferguson, who never had more than a high school education and is proud of it, bobs up everywhere, with or without an audience expecting him. Whether or not he writes his own lines, he generally gives Taft as good as Taft sends.

"Taft and his crowd don't know where they have been . . . they don't know where they are . . . and they don't know where they are going," he tells Democratic street crowds and rallies.

He made an "I come to bury Caesar" speech in Taft's own Cincinnati backyard, railed at Taft's isolationist policies as endangering the safety of the Nation.

In his high-pitched voice he sometimes lights into the Ohio press, which with the exception of two James Cox dailies is preponderantly supporting Taft.

He rags Taft for backing away from his record, calls him "a 10-day New Deal wonder." If the campaign gets hotter he says Taft will probably ask for Mrs. Roosevelt's indorsement.

One Ferguson line gets a laugh: "Hoover promised you two chickens and then Taft came along and took away the rooster."

But he finds it hard to remember he's not still running for auditor. Recently he threatened indirectly to hold up funds for schools taking time out to hear Taft speeches. His handlers concede that was a bobble. What they've been praying for is one of those famous eleventh hour Taft boners. Ferguson's cashed in aplenty already on one of Taft's last Senate acts, opposing Gen. George W. Marshall for Secretary of Defense.

Ferguson's tie-up with labor, which Democratic headquarters are trying hard to minimize, has undoubtedly hurt him in some farm districts and with some conservative Democrats. A whispering campaign hasn't helped either.

One story is that, asked about Formosa, Joe said: "I'll carry it by 25,000 votes." Denying the yarn, friends say Ferguson might not be a whiz on world affairs but he knows intimately every township and county in Ohio.

Former Roosevelt aide Charles West, on leave from Akron University, is helping master-mind his campaign and provides most of the liaison with labor. Henry M. Busch of Western Reserve University, labor's second choice for the Senate seat, who was defeated by Ferguson in the primary, is helping out, too.

Murray D. Lincoln, Ohio Farm Bureau leader, labor's No. 1 Senate preference, who declined to make the race, has recently indorsed Ferguson. Lincoln is scheduled to exchange his politics from Republican to Democratic and make several speeches for Joe.

But Gov. Frank Lausche, more cautious than ever in his campaign for reelection against Republican Don H. Ebright, still hasn't given Ferguson his formal blessing. Odds on Lausche beating Ebright are about 2½ to 1, but the Governor isn't taking any chances with his mixed Democratic and Republican following.

Lausche appears sometimes on the same platform with Ferguson, and the latter's supporters have been hoping for "the word." Even Vice-President Alben Barkley's appearance in the State, jointly plugging for both Ferguson and Lausche, failed to draw a committal. Both candidates latched on to Barkley, however, beamed when they appeared jointly with him.

As usual, it reminded Barkley of a story. He told the one about the boy (Ferguson) who was asked if his girl (Lausche) loved him.

"She don't say she do, but she act like she do and so I think she do," replied the boy.

The three other big imponderables, responsible as much as anything else for the uncertainty in this race are (1) the new Massachusetts type ballot being used for the first time (2) the size of the vote turn-out after a record off-year registration and (3) whether the farm vote which scorned Dewey for Truman two years ago will return to Taft. Nobody has any real doubt that the bulk of the labor vote will support Ferguson.

The new office-type ballot drops the old party designation at the top of the column, that made it easy to vote a straight ticket. Now the voters must put an X beside the name of each candidate. Republicans sponsored the change. Some of them believe it will help Taft, since the vote-getting Lausche at the top of the ticket won't exert the same party-pulling power.

3 GOP Groups Spent Million For Election

By The Associated Press

Three major Republican organizations reported yesterday they have spent more than $1,000,000 in the battle for the control of Congress in next week's election.

That's about $70,000 more than they took in.

The GOP financial statistics were filed with the Clerk of the House under the Federal Corrupt Practices Act. No comparable reports have yet been filed by the Democrats, but the Democratic National Committee spokesman said that from September 1 to October 27 the Democratic organization spent $848,245 and took in $286,660, leaving a balance on October 27 of $237,272. The committee had a balance of approximately $799,000 September 1.

The Republicans filed these separate reports:

1. Republican National Committee: Total receipts from January 1 to October 26 were $657,107 against an outlay of $678,441.

2. National Republican Congressional Committee: Receipts from January 1 to October 25 were $315,636 against expenses of $311,595. From September 1 to October 25 the committee took in $105,436 and spent $145,973.

3. Republican Senatorial Committee: Receipts from September 1 to October 23 were $45,218 and expenditures $98,974. The committee did not list in its latest report its receipts and expenditures earlier this year.

The CIO Political Action Committee also reported it has operated in the red financially this year, taking in $310,227 and spending $362,860 from January 1 to October 24.

The CIO did better, though, in its "Educational Account," which concentrates on State elections. The "Educational Account" took in $109,376 and spent $56,838, including contributions of $7500 to the campaign of James Roosevelt for Governor of California and $12,500 to the Chester Bowles gubernatorial campaign in Connecticut. Both Roosevelt and Bowles are Democrats.

The CIO-PAC listed these contributions to Democratic candidates for United States Senate: Ferguson in Ohio, $4000; Carroll in Colorado, $5000; Loveland in Iowa, $4000; Douglas in California, $2000; Benton in Connecticut, $2500, and McMahon in Connecticut, $1250.

The American Federation of Labor's League for Political Education reported receipts of $514,584 from January 1 to October 26 but did not total its long itemized list of expenditures.. The league's expenditures included these larger contributions to State leagues; California, $18,717; Illinois, $42,531; Missouri, $16,985; New York, $18,982 and Ohio, $16,785. Smaller sums went to other States.

The Republican National Committee listed among its expenditures two payments of $500 each in October to Senator Joseph McCarthy of Wisconsin and one of $316.59 to Harold Stassen, president of the University of Pennsylvania and a presidential aspirant in 1948. The payments were listed for reimbursement of expenses."

Larger contributors to the GOP national committee included: Irenee S. duPont of Wilmington, Del., $3000; Ballie V. Vinson and Mrs. Jewel D. Vinson of Tulsa, Okla., $2500 each; Henry B. duPont, $3000, and John A. Hartford, New York City, $3000.

Hartford also gave $3000 to the Republican congressional committee and $3000 to the GOP senatorial committee. So did Charles E. Merrill of New York and Sewell L. Avery of Chicago.

Large disbursements from the senatorial committee's coffers included these to Republican senatorial nominees:

Senator Capehart of Indiana, $2500; Everett Dirksen of Illinois, $4000; Senator Hickenlooper of Iowa, $2500; Frank Carlson of Kansas, $2500; Charles I. Dawson of Kentucky, $1500; Senator Morse of Oregon, $2500; William Alexander of Oklahoma, $3500; James H. Duff of Pennsylvania, $2500; Francis Case of South Dakota, $2500; Wallace F. Bennett of Utah, $4000; Joseph Talbott of Connecticut, $2500; Walter Williams of Washington, $5000; Prescott S. Bush of Connecticut, $3000; John M. Butler of Maryland, $3500; Senator Tobey of New Hampshire, $5000; Senator Taft of Ohio, $5000; Republican State Committee of Colorado, $5000.

42 Million Ballots Expected To Be Cast in Nov. 7 Voting

By The Associated Press

State officials and party leaders look for a total vote November 7 of more than 42 million, or a 60 percent turnout among the estimated 70 million men and women eligible to vote.

A 42-million vote would be a record for a mid-term election. The previous highest was 37,304,380 in 1938. The last non-Presidential election brought out only 35,874,568 in 1946.

The estimated registration of 69,954,478 is an all-time record. Only a few States keep State-wide registration totals, so the figure represents estimates in most cases. The vote estimate, too, involves much guess-work.

High Registration Noted

Figuring in that vote estimate are high registrations in many Northern and Western States, as well as the South where thousands of Negroes have qualified. Hot State and local races and referenda issues are involved, too.

In many States, officials predicted a vote exceeding the 1948 presidential total.

The actual vote forecast, as compiled by the Associated Press from State sources, came out 42,235,632, the odd figure resulting from the inclusion of the official vote cast for House candidates in Maine September 11.

That Maine vote was higher for governor and House nominees than in the presidential year of 1948. Also, it came after what some GOP leaders described as a dull campaign.

Some political experts doubt the vote this year will go as high as 42 million for the Nation.

But the CIO Political Action Committee says a vote of more than 40 million is indicated if measured by one formula and nearly 48 million by another. A Democratic National Committee official figures the vote will be much higher than the 1938 off-year record if the turnout is normal in proportion to the growth in population.

As Compared with 1940

The last presidential vote—48,833,680 in 1948—compared with a record of 49,820,312 in 1940.

The estimated 1950 registration of 69,954,478 compared with 66,811,617 in 1948 and 59,669,656 in 1946.

Here are some of the 1950 State figures:

NEW YORK—Official registration of 6,432,865, highest for a gubernatorial year. New York City, 2,806,448, a gain of 93,039 over 1946, but about 500,000 under 1948.

California—Official registration of 5,244,837, including 3,062,205 Democrats and 1,944,812 Republicans. This more than one million edge for the Democrats would seem to make them shoon-is, but the State sually goes Republican for State offices. Only one Democratic Governor has been elected there since 1886.

Pennsylvania—Official registration of 4,925,240, including 2,913,101 Republicans and 1,951,223 Democrats. The 1948 total was 4,758,075.

Ohio—An estimated five million voters registered and a record vote of 3,500,000 is forecast by Secretary of State Charles F. Sweeney. The present record is 3,376,239 in 1940.

Illinois—An estimated 5,200,000 voters are eligible, or 100,000 more than in 1948. Massachusetts also has exceeded her 1948 figure by 115,000 with an estimated 2,600,000 qualified.

Oregon—Official registration of 751,270. Democrats outnumber the Republicans for the first time, with 378,357 to 361,158.

5 Deny 'Kickback' Charges

JERSEY CITY, N. J., Oct. 30 (U.P.) Five Jersey City politicians pleaded innocent today to charges of taking 3 percent salary kickbacks from city employes for Democratic Party campaign funds during the Frank Hague regime.

A sixth man named in sealed indictments returned last week by a Hudson County grand jury was hospitalized for treatment of a heart condition and did not appear in court.

Those who pleaded innocent were former Deputy Mayor John F. Malone, Philip F. McGovern, former director of parks and public properties and now warden of the Hudson County jail; John J. Toohey, former deputy director of revenue and finance, one-time State labor commissioner and now a political columnist for the Newark Star-Ledged; James A. Cavanaugh, former deputy director of parks and public properties, and Frank Deisler, superintendent of athletics and recreation of Jersey City.

The sixth man, who will plead later, is Daniel Casey, former director of public safety and one-time police chief.

Twelve other persons were named in the indictments as "co-conspirators" but no indictments were handed down against them. All five men who pleaded innocent were released in their own custody pending trial, the date of which has not yet been set.

The indictments climaxed an investigation launched by Mayor John Kenny, on May 17, 1949, the date he took office after defeating the Hague slate at the polls and ending Hague's 32-year-old reign as boss of Jersey City.

Last June city auditors charged that Malone received $361,000 from City employes during the 1948 and 1949 campaigns. The grand jury returned the indictments last week after a two-week inquiry.

After his arraignment today, Malone issued a statement accusing Kenny of putting him "in this humiliating position" for political reasons.

"Mayor Kenny has used his power as political leader to do his best to destroy me after a lifelong friendship," Malone said. "For over 30 years I helped to elevate him at every opportunity. Now, because I have disagreed with him politically, he has obtained my indictment for the same practices which have been in existence in all political parties in every city in the Nation."

Redskins Must Win, and in Hurry, or Ball Is Out

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Tuesday Morning Quarterback:

FRANKLIN FIELD in Philadelphia will be sold out for the first time this year, come Saturday, and for good reason. It's coming up Penn vs. Army, with George Munger's Quakers taking dead aim at the 25-game defeatless streak of Earl Blaik's Cadets.

Penn is stacking up nicely as a threat to Army. That 34-7 victory over Navy last weekend was significant. In Reds Bagnell, Penn's passing-running tailback, Army will be meeting up with the best football player it has encountered all season.

Povich

I think Army will knock off Penn, though, by at least a couple of touchdowns. The criticism of Army's soft schedule sometimes has served to obscure the fact that Blaik has another powerhouse team. The fact that both Penn and Army beat Columbia by the same score, 34 to 0, is highly misleading.

Unlike Penn, Blaik had to pull his punches to keep the score against Columbia from zooming. The Cadets showed against Michigan that they could handle a single-wing attack like Penn's. Blaik has depth that Munger doesn't.

POOR NAVY FELT the sting of Penn's smart attack last Saturday. Bagnell killed 'em with those clever passes down the middle that caught the Middies' defenders on the wrong foot. And when they sent Glenn Adams around left end on a reverse for a touchdown, it was such clever execution that not a hostile finger was laid upon him.

Coach Eddie Erdelatz of Navy is discovering that in big Bob Zastrow he has a hot-and-cold performer who at his best is sensational, otherwise is a liability. Zastrow is handicapped perhaps by the fact that he is working with a set of pony backs. He is the biggest man in Erdelatz' backfield, and perhaps the best runner. On the few occasions when Zastrow has chosen to run this season he has been a tremendous asset. If Erdelatz isn't toying with the notion of taking him out of the quarterback spot and using Zastrow at fullback, the thought at least has occurred to teams that have been scouting Navy. "I hope it doesn't happen against us," said the man who was scouting for LSU at Franklin Field on Saturday.

WHEN JIM TATUM took his Maryland squad out of Durham, N. C. the other evening after its 26-14 over Duke he should have been completely happy, but wasn't. With the result of the game he was quite content, but Tatum took umbrage at the post-game comment of Wallace Wade. The Duke coach declared his team was "out-manned."

The out-spoken Tatum didn't like that. "I don't understand where Wade gets this talk about being out-manned. We've played him three times and he's beaten me twice, and after both defeats I said I thought the better team won. I never said we got beat because he had more man-power.

"Yet, when we lick his team Wade blames the defeat on not enough man power. I thought perhaps we won the game because we were a little bit better prepared . . . Duke has been in big-time football a long time, and Mr. Wade has access to talent—plenty of it. We heard a lot about Duke's fine line, but we gained 280 yards against it.

"Anyway, I always figured that getting a ball team together was just as much a part of a coach's job as coaching it."

IF THE REDSKINS are not on their way to their worst season, they won't miss it by much. Five straight beatings since winning their first game has been their lot. And with both Harry Gilmer and Sammy Baugh hurt, they are in foul shape. It's the kind of situation that leads to the firing of a head coach, although we wouldn't like to see it happen to Herman Ball.

All that wonderful personnel the Redskins said they were giving Ball hasn't manifested itself yet. Ball's trouble is that he doesn't have enough good football players. He has given the club a more imaginative attack than it ever had, but the execution has been ragged, particularly in the line.

Against the Eagles on Sunday, Baugh was running for his life when he tried to pass in the second half, and took a fearful beating. He was getting none of the smart protection the Eagles gave their Tommy Thompson. The Eagles swooped down on him and scored three cheap touchdowns on fumbles and interceptions.

Baugh no doubt was yearning for those good lines the Redskins used to throw up in front of him, and peace in his time.

Coaches Rate SMU Over Army, Terps Jump to 15th

NEW YORK, Oct. 30 (U.P.)—Southern Methodist, although idle last weekend, took over today as the Nation's No. 1 football team, with Army, leader for the three previous weeks, dropping to second.

It marked the first time that a team other than Army or Notre Dame has led the United Press football ratings, compiled from the selections of 35 of the Nation's outstanding coaches on the basis of 10 points for a first-place vote, 9 for a second, and so on down to 1 for tenth.

It also climaxed a gradual rise by the Mustangs, one of the Nation's eight unbeaten and untied major elevens. They ranked fifteenth in the preseason ratings, jumped to seventh in the first weekly poll, to fourth in the second and second in the third. They fell back to third the fourth week, but climbed back to second place last week, and now have taken the top spot.

Receiving 10 first-place votes—against 21 last week—Army placed second with 294 points with Ohio State's powerful Buckeyes advancing to third place. Ohio State received seven first-place votes and a total of 261 points.

Ohio State, beaten by Southern Methodist in its season opener, was fifth last week.

Maryland's Terrapins, by virtue of their 26-14 victory over Duke, jumped from last week's No. 34 position to 15th this week.

Oklahoma, third last week, dropped to fourth with one first-place ballot and a total of 221 points. Rounding out the top 10 were California, Kentucky, Texas, Illinois, Princeton and Washington in that order.

Money Doesn't Worry Rickey

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 30 (AP).—Branch Rickey, known as a shrewd manipulator of the dollar, said today he is open to any "firm" baseball offer but that money isn't the important thing.

He recalled that he had been chided about his ability to drive a hard bargain and added:

"Money is not of the first importance. The nature of the work, where I live, and my associations come first with me."

The 69-year-old Rickey, who sold his interest in the Brooklyn Dodgers for more than one million dollars last week, said baseball is still a big challenge to him.

Has he had any definite offers?

"Yes," Rickey replied. "But terms and conditions have not been discussed."

"There is little likelihood that I will become identified with one of the St. Louis clubs."

How about reports he might wind up in the front office of the Pittsburgh Pirates?

"Mr. (John) Galbreath (president of the Pirates) has openly said he would like me to come to Pittsburgh," Rickey answered. "I'm under great personal obligation to Mr. Galbreath and if I were to go back into baseball Mr. Galbreath would be given careful consideration."

Caps Open Season Tonight In Rochester

Washington's Caps open their National Basketball Association season tonight at Rochester and the schedule maker can't be accused of doing them any favor.

Last year, the Caps dropped six games in as many starts against the Royals.

After tonight's opener, the Caps return to Uline Arena for their home debut in the league tomorrow night against the Indianapolis Olympians. The Indianapolis club largely is composed of the former University of Kentucky national champs, Alex Groza, Wah-Wah Jones, Ralph Beard & Co.

BASKETBALL EXHIBITION

Philadelphia 80 .... New York Knicks 65

Caps Stronger

Bolstered by the addition of five flashy rookies, the seasoned Frank Kudelka, and Ace Maughan, the Caps feel that they're ready to regain their top place in pro basketball.

Sweeping two exhibition games from the Baltimore Bullets and one from the Philadelphia Warriors, Coach Bones McKinney's team shows definite promise.

The yearlings are led by Dick Schnittker, who scored 12 points in the only game he played against the Warriors. Dick was with the College All-Star team that lost to Minneapolis, 61-54. He was held to three foul goals in that one.

Other standouts include Bill Sharman, Alan Sawyer, Earl Lloyd and Tommy O'Keefe.

Holdovers who need no introduction are 7-foot Don Otten, Freddy Scolari, Chick Halbert, Dick O'Keefe, Chuck Gilmur and Johnny Norlander.

If the Army draft doesn't take away too many of the young rookies, the Caps seem to be headed one way—up. Schnittker and Lloyd, however, already have been tapped by their local boards and may not be around too long.

It's going to be interesting to see how Bones McKinney, clown prince of pro basketball, adjusts himself to the more sedate role of coach.

Only thing everybody's worried about is that the Caps won all their exhibition games. Look what happened to the Redskins.

9 Major Teams

Only nine major teams are left with unsmeared slates. They are Southern Methodist, Army, Oklahoma, Kentucky, California, Miami (Fla.), Princeton, Wyoming and Loyola (Calif.).

Three listed as majors by the National Collegiate Athletic Bureau were among the week's casualties. They were Cornell, beaten by Princeton, 27-0; Northwestern, beaten by Wisconsin, 14-13, and Wichita, beaten by Houston, 46-6.

For Great Game With Tennessee

W & L's Barclay Coach of the Week

YOU DON'T have to be a winner to be Coach of the Week.

The Washington Post salutes Washington and Lee's George Barclay for the tremendous job he and his Generals did against tough Tennessee Saturday.

George Barclay

Using only 27 players, W. & L. lost a 27-20 heartbreaker to the club ranked eighth in the Nation. Only three spectacular long runs and a blocked kick saved Tennessee from a stunning upset.

Bart Rechichar returned a punt 100 yards and took an intercepted pass 50 yards for two of the scores. Jimmy Hahn went 83 yards with a kickoff return and the Vols scored after blocking a kick on the W. & L. 24 to take a 27-6 halftime lead.

But W. & L. only had begun to fight. Outmanned, they outrushed burly Tennessee, 251 yards to 171 and made 19 first downs to 8 for the winners.

Barclay was talking about those mistakes yesterday. "Funny thing about that 100-yard punt return," he said, "we kicked from midfield in the corner, just where we were trying to kick it. We covered well, it was just that a few of the boys forgot to tackle.

W. and L.'s showing was even more remarkable when you consider that Gil Bocetti, ace passer and split-T general, was injured and knocked out of the game early in the second period.

This W. & L. team that Barclay was optimistic about before the season opened has an excellent chance of winning the Southern Conference title in this his second year as head coach.

The Generals have to beat VPI and Richmond to post a 6-0 league record. Some of the Conference neighbors have been scoffing at W. & L. because of its weak schedule, but the game W. & L. gave Tennessee ought to silence a lot of the critics. Tennessee walloped Duke, 28-7, you know.

The affable 39-year old mentor who was North Carolina's first All-America in 1933 said he was flattered by his selection as Coach of the Week.

"I don't know whether or not I deserve the honor," Barclay smiled, "all week I stressed pass defense because I feared the throwing of Tennessee's Hank Lauricella. So what happened? Tennessee threw one pass all day. It was incomplete, though."

In Orange Bowl

Hoyas, With Lone Triumph, Play Unbeaten Miami Friday

By Jack Walsh

Post Reporter

After losing the Villanova game it should have won, Georgetown's football team yesterday started trying to devise a method of winning one it should lose.

The luckless Hoyas, with only one victory in five starts, go up against powerful Miami in the Orange Bowl Friday night. One of nine unbeaten major teams in the country, Miami's sweep of five games has given it 13th place in the UP Coaches' poll.

Adding to Georgetown's woes is the fact that the squad won't be in top physical condition

Soph Dick Doyle, who's blossomed into a sweet runner, sprained an ankle early in the fourth period of the Villanova game. It was "doubtful" yesterday if he will be ready Friday night.

Doyle got loose against Maryland for runs of 22 and 15 yards. He was a big man in the B. C. triumph with 100 yards in 18 tries. For three quarters Saturday, he picked up 86 yards.

Bugs Thompson, always a running threat, also sprained an ankle Saturday and Passer Frank Mattingly bruised his throwing arm. Others with assorted bumps include crack Linebacker Bill Fisher, Ends Harry Schmitt and Charley Acocella and Tackle Jack Dunn.

With 19 first downs to nine, Georgetown outgained Villanova on the ground, two to one. The Hoyas successfully throttled the Wildcat defense, too, and held Fullback Pete D'Alonzo to 20 yards in 12 attempts. D'Alonzo went into the game the country's ninth leading rusher.

Three vital mistakes cost Georgetown the ball game. The Villanova team that didn't show much offense cashed in on each for a score. It completed a 45-yard pass through Capt. Tommy Hardiman, took an intercepted pass 52 yards and recovered Jack O'Mahoney's fumble on the Hoya eight.

It was a bitter defeat for Coach Bob Margarita. He said, "With a schedule like ours, we can't afford to let one get away. I can't crab, though, technically our game was fine. The boys tackled and blocked extremely well.

Hairston Beats Gavilan

SCRANTON, Oct. 30 (AP).—Gene (Silent) Hairston, 153, of New York, scored his second major upset in Scranton in two months tonight when he won a disputed 10-round split decision from Kid Gavilan, 150, of Havana, at the Armory.

Jimmy Cooper Gives Bowman Kayo Lesson

By Dave Heller

Post Reporter

Fighting Sunday School Teacher Don Bowman, of Asheville, N. C., learned a lesson last night—don't get careless when you're fighting District Featherweight Champ Jimmy Cooper.

Bowman learned his lesson the hard way. Cooper knocked him out in 37 seconds of the fourth round of their main event bout before 1,086 fight fans at Turner's Arena last night. And it was all a mistake you might say.

For two rounds the sharp-punching Bowman earned a slight edge over Cooper with hard straight lefts. Then answering the bell for the third round, Bowman came out too fast and a little too confidently. Before he knew what happened, Cooper caught him with a sledgehammer left and downed him for a nine count. The local boy showered rights and lefts on Bowman and he had a hard time lasting out the round.

In the fourth and final round, Cooper came in fast and staggered the Tar Heel. Shifting to a punishing body attack, Cooper opened up Bowman and made him drop his guard. Two crashing blows to the head put Bowman down for the count.

In the semifinal, Chink Williams got revenge over Lightweight Connie Wilkins who scored a TKO over him three weeks ago. In a furious bout, Williams drew blood from a big gash over Wilkins' left eye and the boxing commission physician ordered the bout stopped. The time was 2 minutes, 50 seconds of the third round.

Brion Wins Decision, Meets Louis Next

BALTIMORE, Md., Oct. 30 (U.P.). Cesar Brion, 194½, Argentina, won a 10-round unanimous decision over Keene Simmons, 202½, New York, tonight at Baltimore Coliseum.

It was a dull fight. Brion tried to stir up some action, but Simmons kept running into clinches. Brion, who fights Joe Louis next month, landed several good long rights to the head, but the New Yorker held on

Players Good but 'Something Is Wrong'

By Morris Siegel

Post Reporter

The Redskins must win, and win in a hurry, or Herman Ball is through as their head coach.

George Marshall, Redskins' president, didn't say that specifically yesterday, but he inferred it in no uncertain terms.

"Every business makes changes when things aren't going good, and football is no different," he said.

Distressed over the plight of his team which has lost five straight games and is in the cellar in its division of the National Football League, the Redskins president said in on interview:

"We have as good material as any team in the league, yet we aren't winning. Something's wrong somewhere."

Marshall, who at first appeared indignant that the question of a coaching change be brought up at this time, said:

Six More Games

"Now is not the time to be speaking of coaching changes. We have six more games to play. If we win our share of those, Ball will again be the toast of the town as he was when we won all five of our pre-season games."

The Redskins meet New York Giants, Philadelphia Eagles, Cleveland Browns, Baltimore Colts, Pittsburgh Steelers and Browns again in their six remaining games.

Marshall is seldom patient with a losing Redskins coach. A year ago, almost to the day, the contract of Admiral Billick Whelchel was "mutually terminated," and Ball, then the Redskins chief scout, took over for the rest of the season as head coach.

When told that many observers and fans thought Ball has done the best Redskins coaching job in years, that his present team is definitely more imaginative than any Redskin team of recent years and that nice-guy Ball is extremely popular with his players, Marshall said:

"Yes, I know. I'm not putting the finger on Herman or anyone else at this time. I say again, however, we aren't winning. Don't quote me as saying we are making a coaching change or planning one. Do your own speculating."

Last week, after the Redskins' dropped a 38-28 game to the Chicago Cardinals, a minority Redskins stockholder reportedly demanded at a meeting of club officials that a "name coach" be hired.

The collapse of the Redskins after their preseason exhibition victories has baffled the players as well as club officials. The team won five games in a row on a coast-to-coast tour and has won only one league game in six. That lone victory was over Baltimore, 38-14.

Many of the league's coaches regard Ball as a shrewd football man, despite his unpretentious coaching background—high school and as an assistant coach at Maryland before joining the Redskins as full-time scout.

George Halas, owner-coach of the Chicago Bears, has said of Ball, "there's a young fellow who knows this game thoroughly." Ball

Gilmer Uncertain; Sebek Recalled

Harry Gilmer suffered a bone chip in his shoulder against the Eagles Sunday and may not be able to play Sunday against the Giants, X-rays revealed yesterday.

With Gilmer's status uncertain and Sammy Baugh not yet recovered from a chip in the elbow of his pitching arm, the Redskins yesterday recalled Nick Sebek, rookie quarterback from Indiana University.

Sebek, cut from the Redskins in September, played three games with now defunct Brooklyn Dodgers of the American Football League.

Gilmer hurt his shoulder tackling Jack Ferrante, Eagles' end, but did not tell Coach Herman Ball about it until late in the first half when he was unable to raise his right arm.

Halloween Jinx: Laurel Jockey Suspended, Then Wins but Loses

Foul Beats Williams Out Of Victory

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

LAUREL, Oct. 30.—Jockey Dick Williams has reason to believe Halloween Eve is his unlucky day.

Two hours after he received word that the stewards had suspended him for 10 days, Williams drove home aboard W. W. Waters' Four Chances to take a photo decision from P. A. Sullivan's Double Nip in today's featured the Pundit Purse.

But Jockey Ike Bassett, who piloted Double Nip, registered an objection and the stewards, after viewing movies of the race, disqualified Four Chances, placing him second and making Double Nip the winner.

Led Most of Way

Four Chances had the lead most of the way and Williams was accused of not retarding the filly when she went wide entering the stretch, carrying the challenging Double Nip with her.

Double Nip, one of several well played members of the field of seven, paid $10.80. Four Chances closed at odds of 12 to 1. The winning time for the 6 furlongs was 1:12 1/5. A crowd of 8805 saw the Monday program conducted in shirt-sleeve weather.

Williams, who could be further disciplined for today's foul, was originally suspended for striking Jockey Bobby Mitchell with his whip in the running of the first race last Saturday.

Williams was riding Joe Mandell and Mitchell was up on Roy O, as the two platers battled for the lead through the stretch.

Joe Mandell outlasted his rival in the final drive but Walter's Boy came along on the outside and won going away.

Pimlico Special May Boil Down to 3 Horses

LAUREL, Oct. 30.—What appeared, on paper at least, to be a 10-horse Pimlico Special, a few days ago dwindled today to a possible three-horse affair as eligibles, for one reason or another ducked out of the $15,000 winner take-all classic.

The Maryland Jockey Club still hopes that at least five horses will face starter Eddie Blind in Friday's "dream race." However, only two are now regarded in the "definite starter group. They are the Palatine Stable's Chicle II, and Mrs. E. du Pont Weir's Royal Governor.

While trainer Jerry McAlly says he has Lewis Shaw's Abstract ready, the colt who was a surprise winner of the Washington Handicap here, must pass a veterinarian's test before going to the paddock, due to blindness in one eye and a condition that periodically affects the other optic.

Two possible starters are Greentree Stable's One Hitter and Hasty House Stable's Inseparable. One Hitter, twice conqueror of the highly regarded Noor in New York, may be shipped to Pimlico on Wednesday. Inseparable's handler's say this horse would be in the field, providing the track is off.

The Special, which has drawn the top 3-year-olds many times, will be without sophomore representation this year. Word was received today that Brookmeade Stable's Greek Ship and Thomas Gray's Oil Capital will stay in New York for Saturday's $30,000 Empire City Htandicap, a 3-year-old race at Jamaica.

King Ranch has withdrawn Better Self, while George D. Widener's Lights Up is considered definitely out of the competition.

Marylanders won't have a chance to root for Frank A. Bonsal's Pilaster, the old Strauss Stable campaigner, either.

Pilaster, a convincing winner here before showing a dull effort, is believed to have a broken sesamoid bone and is definitely through for the year.

62d National Horse Show Opens Today

By Harry De Mawby, Jr.

NEW YORK, N. Y., Oct. 30—The sixty-second National Horse Show opens at Madison Square Garden tomorrow with some 320 exhibitors from 23 States, the District of Columbia, Canada, Chile, England, Ireland and Mexico showing a record number of 550 horses in the eight day and night sessions.

A total of 2393 entries will compete for the $31,000 in prize money and many trophies and ribbons offered in the 130 events for harness horses and ponies, five and three-gaited saddle horses, ponies, hunters, open jumpers, junior classes and international jumping competitions.

Comprising a strong Virginia, Maryland and District entry which are expected to take down a good percentage of the National's awards are such well-known exhibitors as Morton W. Smith, whose Jerry's Pride and Royal Chief just accounted for the top green and conformation hunter championships at the Pennsylvania National; Mrs. Alex Calvert, Mr. and Mrs. Gardner Hallman, Avon Shockey, Bobby Gardner, Rolland Berry, Mrs. M. E. Pearson's Llangollen Stables, Springsbury Farm, Martin Vogel, jr., Waverly Farm, Mr. and Mrs. W. Haggin Perry, George Di Paula, Linky Smith, Roxanne Wagner, Cheerie McKee, Hi-Rock Farm, Mrs. T. Kenneth Ellie, Mrs. Raymond Barbin, Carol Ebeling, Laura Lee Shreve, Hugh Wiley and many others.

Ball Must Win Or He's Out

is not the shouting type. Instead, he is quiet and deals with his players on a man-to-man basis.

Despite his team's success on the exhibition circuit, Ball was not satisfied that his Redskins production was a world-beater. He was courteous to well-wishers, but cautioned all, "remember the preseason games don't count in the league standings."

Ball's players have all the confidence in the world in him. "He understands our problems, he's one of us," one veteran observed. "I think he'll be a great coach. I know all of the players are trying hard as the dickens for him."

But today the league record for the Redskins read: One won, five lost.

North-South Golf Opens

PINEHURST, N. C., Oct. 30 (AP).—A formidable field formed today to chase down Samuel Jackson Snead in the North and South Open Golf Tournament opening tomorrow.

Jack Grout, a bespectacled professional playing out of Columbus, Ohio, shot a 3-under-par 69 today to lead the qualifying field.

Back of him came surprising Bill Goldbeck, "fiftyish" professional from Mount Kisco, N. Y., and Charles C. (Chuck) Klein, San Antonio, Tex., pro, who both posted 33 37—70. Fifty players made the grade with a qualifying limit of 76.

The low 50 from today's field of 135 will be joined tomorrow by 60 who were not required to qualify.

Among the professionals, there are such threats as Clayton Heafner, Johnny Palmer, Jim Turnesa, Bob Hamilton, Chandler Harper, Joe Kirkwood, Jr., Claude Harmon and Eddie Burke, who trimmed Slammer Snead in this year's PGA championship.

Jethroe, Dropo Top Rookies

NEW YORK, Oct. 30 (U.P.).—Sam Jethroe of the Braves and Walt Dropo of the Red Sox were named today by the United Press as the year's best rookies in balloting by baseball writers from each city in the majors.

Dropo, the gigantic first baseman who came back after a fast failure in 1949 to win the Brave batting title with .354, was named on 15 out of a possible 24 ballots in the American League voting.

Jethroe, a product of the Brooklyn Farm system who cost the Braves more than $100,000, proved he was worth every penny of it, landing on 14 ballots for his fine performance in center field, a position he was not accustomed to playing. He hit .273.

AT LAUREL

DEAR FOLKS:

Brookmeade Stable, owned by Mrs. Isabel Dodge Sloane, is making a valiant effort to overtake Calumet Farm in the race for national honors in money earned this season. After last Saturday's sport, Brookmeade was just $18,631 behind the Calumet outfit, which is currently idle on the West Coast, awaiting the opening of the Hollywood Park meeting. Brookmeade may pass the Wright barn the coming weekend when Greek Ship goes in the $30,000 Empire City Handicap at Jamaica. His handlers decided to pass up the Pimlico Special for which the colt was eligible. Should Greek Ship pick up only part of the New York purse, then the filly, Atalanta, might boost Brookmeade to the front should she win the Marguerite at Pimlico. See you on the rail. —BILL.

Bakke Back for Irish–Navy Still Feels Penn Shock

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Oct. 30 (AP). Still dumbfounded by what happened in Philadelphia last Saturday, Navy began preparations today for a football venture into the Midwest.

Announcement that Capt. Tom Bakke would be ready after a month's layoff brightened grid headquarters at Annapolis as the midshipmen drilled for their annual sortie against Notre Dame.

Before going outside for a brief workout today, the squad glimpsed motion pictures and heard a critique of the Franklin Field incident. Research failed to answer how the midshpmen lost by such a one-sided score while so outdistancing Penn on ground and in air that they finished with a 21-4 edge in first downs.

"That score doesn't describe the game," Erdelatz said. "It's got me."

Falls Church To Expand Water System

By a unanimous vote, the Falls Church City Council last night agreed to borrow $131,000 to set up a "high-level" system which would supply water to hilltop homes the present system can't reach.

It was the first major use of the city's new charter power to borrow money direct from a bank on bonds for the indebtedness.

Among the Falls Church high points which will benefit from the improvement, are the Bernan, Poplar Heights, Donna Lee Gardens, Falls Hill, and Mount Daniel areas. All have suffered water shortages from the present low-pressured system in the past.

The new system also would serve a proposed Falls Church high school on Leesburg pike at Haycock rd.

City officials pointed out it could provide water to the Dunloring, Tyson's Corner, and Vienna sections of Fairfax County.

The council authorized City Manager W. R. Woodbury to advertise for bids on the short term loan, and approved five bids totaling $105,652 for component parts of the new water system.

In another action, the council turned down a request of Falls Church retail merchants for money to install street Christmas lighting. The council decided it had no money available for the lighting.

Brown Insists He Was Drunk Day of Ball-Bat Slaying

Charlie H. (Three Finger) Brown, 55, stuck to his claim yesterday that he was drunk the day Raymond E. (Big Red) Lewis was killed by a baseball bat.

Brown is on trial in District Court for first-degree murder in the slaying of Lewis. The case may reach the jury today.

Lewis, a "flophouse" manager, was killed as he lay on the Mall lawn on June 30. Some 200 feet away, police found Brown seated on the ground.

Later that day, Brown confessed and gave revenge as his motive, police said. Brown has testified he believed Lewis swindled him out of proceeds from a pension check and had once assaulted him.

To question after question in an hour of cross-examination, Brown said he could not remember the events of the day. Brown said he had consumed more than two fifths of wine and was "dead drunk."

Police and jail officials testified there was evidence Brown had been drinking, but that he was not drunk.

But Brown's contention gained support from Mrs. Louise S. Roston, 627 Morris pl. ne., who was manager of the rooming house where Brown had spent the night before the killing.

She said when Brown left that morning, he "appeared to be drunk, but walked as straight as could be." She said he muttered to himself as he passed her and reeked of alcohol.

Paging Mary Haworth! Coach Has Problem

OKLAHOMA CITY, Oct. 30 (AP). Tulsa Football Coach Buddy Brothers would like Women's Columnist Mary Haworth to write a chapter on the etiquette of apologizing because you beat a team too badly.

"It was embarrassing to beat Bradley 74-7," Brothers told the Monday Quarterbacks Club here today. "Before I knew it, the game got out of control."

Ceilings Put on Flowers

BUENOS AIRES, Oct. 30 (U.P.). The Peron government did romance a service today by fixing ceiling prices for flowers. Five cents will buy a dozen poppies and $2.50 a dozen of the finest gladioli. Orchids, however, were not on the list.

Court Upholds Bequests to 2 Church Groups

Two religious institutions here are entitled to a bequest of $59,000 under a ruling yesterday of the United States Court of Appeals.

Two-thirds of the sum goes to the Protestant Episcopal Cathedral Foundation of the District of Columbia and the remainder to the Church of the Nativity.

The bequests were made by Mrs. Lillian L. Nutting, a doctor's widow who died in 1947. She left approximately $118,000.

She drew up three wills, the last dated 12 days before her death. All three made the religious bequests.

Twelve of her relatives contested the bequests, citing District law that bequests to religious institutions are void where willed less than a month before death.

The court found, however, that since the bequests were identical to those of the prior wills, they were valid.

Prisoner Fixes Own Jail Term

A confessed thief yesterday gave a Municipal Court judge some advice about his own sentence and Judge George D. Neilson followed it to the letter.

Thomas B. Butler, 29, Aikensen ct. sw., admitted stealing two overcoats and asked the judge to send him to jail "to break the habit."

"What would you suggest in the way of a sentence?" a surprised Judge Neilson asked.

"About 50 days," Butler suggested.

"So be it; 50 days," the judge ordered.

Firemen Report Six False Alarms On Halloween Eve; 42 Rung Last Year

The kiddies, who make a big thing of Halloween, were abroad last night free loading on the goodies proffered by nervous householders who know the meaning of "trick or treat."

Apples, candy corn, all the Halloween delicacies were offered the small fry to dissuade the "ghosts" who can so mysteriously spirit away porch furniture, back gates and the like come tonight.

For District police and firemen, who recall with a shiver last year's 42 false alarms, this Halloween eve was almost like a day off. Only six times was the Fire Department called out to non-existent fires. The pranksters were laying low.

And the adults who have just shined their cars and painted their homes can rest a little easier this Halloween in the knowledge that the D. C. Recreation Department, the Police Boys Clubs, and the schools will be doing their best to cut down mischief in all its Halloween forms.

THE FEDERAL DIARY
is omitted today as Jerry Klutz is out of town.

The Boys Clubs last night began their two-evening program to keep the little clowns and elves happy and out of trouble.

Clubs throughout the District held open house for members and their friends last night and will continue the good work tonight. There will be dancing for teenagers, costume contests with prizes, and sports events.

Washington's municipal playgrounds staged parties last night. Playground staffs have been busy for weeks preparing decorations, costumes and party favors.

Macfarland Junior High School circulated a pledge among the student body binding the teenagers not to harm the property of others or even beg for treats. The response was good, Mrs. Myrtle T. McKnew, counselor, said. Almost 80 percent of the student body signed the pledges.

The kids countered with suggestions to keep themselves out of mischief. According to the junior high school counselor, such things as television programs of ghoulish nature and parties sponsored by the merchants were suggested.

Maj. Robert J. Barrett, police superintendent, urged parents to discourage their children from defacing property with soap and paint and turning in false fire alarms.

Said Barrett: "It is not desired to deprive the children of their enjoyment of Halloween and members of the Metropolitan Police Department will be tactful and considerate, but vandalism and malicious property damage will not be tolerated."

The rest is up to the kids.

Gang Attacks Youths, One Is Hospitalized

A 16-year-old boy suffered a possible skull fracture last night when he and a companion were assaulted by a group of teen-agers at Georgia ave. and Quincy st. nw.

Admitted to Garfield Hospital for X-rays of head injuries was Peter Pammel, 16, son of Harold E. Pammel, superintendent of grounds and roads at the United States Soldiers Home. His condition was undetermined.

Police said Peter and a friend, Pat Walker, 16, of 4217 4th st. nw., were walking along the street shortly after 9 p.m., when a gang of six or eight boys set upon them. Peter was knocked to the pavement, striking his head. The gang tore off some of Pat's clothes and kicked and beat him, but he did not require hospital treatment, police said.

Four Injured When Auto Crashes Tree

Four persons were injured at 5:10 p. m. yesterday at 16th st. and Alaska ave. nw. when the driver of an auto lost control and crashed into a tree.

Admitted to Emergency Hospital:

Dorothy Burns, 28, of Route 2, Gaithersburg, Md., who suffered head and body lacerations. Hospital authorities said she was the driver of the car.

Margaret M. Johnson, 25, also of Route 2, Gaithersburg, who suffered a leg fracture; James Gillis, 26, of Mount Airy, Md. with a fractured hip, and Emerson Saylor, 35, of Monrovia, N. H., who suffered lacerations.

All were passengers in the car, according to hospital officials.

Police said Dorothy Burns was driving north on 16th st. when she suddenly swerved across the south lane of traffic and into the tree.

Three ambulances and Rescue Squad No. 2 were called to the scene to transport the injured. Four motorcycle policemen responded to handle traffic.

Mrs. Alice Miller, 71, of 1485 Columbia rd. nw. suffered abrasions to her left knee and a back injury when she was struck by an automobile as she crossed 14th st. at Columbia rd. about 1:15 p. m. yesterday.

Driver of the auto, police said, was Samuel Dickman of 8516 Milford ave., Silver Spring, Md. The accident happened, police said, when Dickman made a right turn from Columbia rd. into 14th st. Mrs. Miller was walking east across 14th. A Corporation Counsel hearing was set for November 15.

Ambulance Case

Siren Song A Blue Note For Driver

Hearing of charges that a Washington ambulance driver sped his vehicle, with its siren screaming, needlessly through Hyattsville streets was continued yesterday until November 6.

The driver, James O. Cox, 23, of 148 F st. se., was arrested Sunday afternoon by Hyattsville Policeman Charles Williams after a half-mile chase through heavy traffic.

He was charged by Williams with sounding a siren and displaying red blinker lights when not on an emergency call. In addition, Williams placed charges of reckless driving, exceeding 25 miles an hour and failure to give right-of-way to an emergency vehicle—the police car.

Williams said he first noticed the ambulance weaving from side to side on Baltimore ave. in Hyattsville, forcing pedestrians to flee for cover. Giving chase through heavy traffic, he said he forced the vehicle to a stop near the George Washington House in Bladensburg after the driver repeatedly ignored his commands to stop.

Cox, who is employed by the Hospital Ambulance Service of 1823 L st. nw. told Williams he was on an emergency call, but his running sheet showed he was merely answering a call to transport an invalid, the officer said.

Cox was released under personal bond on the recommendation of State's Attorney A. Gwynn Bowie in Hyattsville Police Court.

Former Marine Commandant Alexander A. Vandegrift yesterday accepted the post as chief of civil defense of the American Veterans of World War II.

Guilty Plea Means Innocence And Vice-Versa, Youth Finds

An 18-year-old youth yesterday was acquitted of a drunken-driving charge, to which he pleaded guilty, and convicted of four other charges, to which he pleaded innocent.

The youth, Robert L. Baker, of 3370 Chillum rd., Mount Rainier, was fined $145 by Hyattsville Trial Magistrate Robert W. McCullough. He was given until December 11 to pay the fines, imposed for driving more than 70 miles per hour, reckless driving and failure to stop at a stop sign and at a red light.

McCullough also imposed a 30-day jail sentence for reckless driving but suspended the term on condition Baker "not drive an automobile, or even get behind the wheel of one," for 30 days.

Baker pleaded guilty to the drunken driving charge placed by Prince Georges County Policeman J. P. Kearns after a chase October 5.

Magistrate McCullough acquitted Baker of this charge, saying that no testimony on drunken driving was presented at the trial and "furthermore, I don't believe anyone could have driven the way you did while drunk."

Kearns said after the hearing that he made no specific reference in his testimony to Baker's condition but pointed out that Baker had pleaded guilty to this charge.

D. C. Youth Accused of Auto Theft

Two Detectives Identify Vehicle Taken in Maryland And Outwait Driver

The good memory and long patience of two auto squad detectives spelled trouble yesterday for Robert M. Kelley, 21, of 618 12th st. nw.

As a result of the detectives' work, Kelley is charged with the grand larceny of an auto.

The two policemen, Detective Sergts. C. I. Smith and J. G. Williams, were cruising in the 1200 block of 11th st. nw. when they spotted a 1948 green Chrysler sedan with District tags.

They remembered that a car of the same type, but with Maryland tags, had been reported stolen several months ago. So they checked the numbers on the District tags and found they were issued to Kelley.

The two detectives further remembered that in 1948 they had arrested a Robert Kelley for auto theft. They decided to check the motor number on the Chysler sedan. It matched the motor number of a car reported stolen by William Bralove, jr., 1812 August dr., Silver Spring, Md.

Patience came next. Smith and Williams disconnected the car's spark plugs and moved across the street to wait for Kelley's appearance. Five hours later he turned up and the detectives closed in.

Kelley admitted taking the car from behind the Shoreham Hotel, the detectives said. He told them he had served 18 months in jail for the earlier auto theft, had purchased an old Plymouth on his release, but liked the Chrysler better, so he sold his Plymouth and had been driving the Chrysler ever since, they added. He will be arraigned in Municipal Court today.

Arlington Man Electrocuted in Moving TV Aerial

Robinson, who lived at 934 S. Buchanan st., Arlington, was removing the aerial from the roof of the home of John R. Gollan, jr., at 932 S. Buchanan st., to help Gollan get ready to move to the District.

Police said Robinson slipped, lost his balance and the aerial fell across a 4000-volt power line running next to the house. He was pronounced dead on arrival at Arlington Hospital.

Gollan told police he was standing on the ground below, watching, and that he shouted to Robinson to let go of the aerial, but Robinson hung on to it.

Robinson is survived by his wife, Catherine.

Slum Budget Indorsement Is Expected

District Asks HHFA To O.K. $170,185 To Finance Studies Of Clearance Sites

By Thomas Winship
Post Reporter

The requested $170,185 Budget of the District Redevelopment Land Agency will produce detailed studies for three slum clearance projects here and eight $5400 to $10,000-a-year jobs.

Details were disclosed by the District Commissioners yesterday in a letter to the Housing and Home Finance Agency, urging prompt approval.

The Federal agency is almost certain to approve the budget as presented because it helped the city heads and the National Capital Park and Planning Commission prepare the justification.

Penniless Condition

HHFA gave the assist since the local land agency has no staff, is penniless and has been in that state since its creation four years ago.

The proposed Federal grant also provides funds for the local planning commission to hire five extra planning experts and draftsmen at a total payroll of $28,600.

The slum clearance law assigns to NCPPC the job of preparing all redevelopment blueprints. Under the $170,000 budget, the land agency says it will select three specific project areas from a survey of these three areas during the next year:

1. A southwest area bounded by Virginia ave. on the north; 7th st. on the west; James Creek Parkway on the east, and P st. on the south.

2. A southeast area bounded by Pennsylvania ave. on the north, S. Capitol st. on the west, 11th st. on the east and M st. on the south.

3. A northwest area bounded by New York ave. on the north, 5th st. on the west, N. Capitol st. on the east and Constitution ave. on the south.

Must Apply for Funds

Following preparation of the site studies, the land agency must then apply for money for actual purchase of the land and to raze buildings.

Housing officials are in general agreement that unsettled international conditions and Government controls will not delay slum clearance here or elsewhere during the next 12 months since the necessary preliminary planning will require at least that much time.

The budget calls for these top positions and salaries in the land agency: executive director, $10,000; administrative assistant, $5400; relocation officer (to plan for rehousing persons evicted from slum clearance projects), $7600; redevelopment planning associate (to coordinate activities between the agency and the planning commission), $7600, and an urban land economist (to advise on land use and resale problems), $7600.

Added to the planning commission staff would be a chief of planning at $7600 and an assistant planner and planning analyst, both at $5400, and two draftsmen, each at about $3600 annually.

Post Book Fair for Children Meets Test—the Young Approve

The Washington Post Children's Book Fair met the acid test yesterday—it won approval of the children themselves.

Wide-eyed, well-mannered, they circulated among the displays in the Department of Commerce lobby, sometimes becoming so engrossed in a particular book that they did not hear their names called.

"I didn't know there were so many books," one said as he surveyed the array of more than 1200 volumes representing the cream of the lists of some 65 of the country's leading publishers of juveniles.

He was among those who at various times during the day sat down on the floor, lost to the world in a book.

Children from nine Greater Washington schools, escorted by teachers, came to the fair yesterday.

Some 500 children from 11 schools are scheduled today to visit the fair, held under the auspices of the National Capital Sesquicentennial Commission.

School children were not the only visitors yesterday. There was at least one future reader who came in a "teeter-babe," and seemingly enjoyed the books. High school girls in bobby sox, textbooks under their arms, and Department of Commerce employes—surprised when they came to work in the morning at the lobby filled with books—were among other visitors.

Among the speakers on today's program is Mrs. Betty O'Connor, who came from Des Moines, Iowa, to speak today and Thursday to members of the younger set. She is the proprietor of a children's book shop and the editor of "Better Homes and Gardens Story Book."

Her interest in children's books she explains by saying, "I found that the people I liked best constantly referred to situations and characters in books as though they were old friends.

MRS. BETTY O'CONNOR
. . . Book Fair speaker today

"I hated being left out of these conversations and determined that if I ever had a child of my own it would be my chief concern and pleasure to find the best books for him.

"So it came about that the building of my own little boy's library became a hobby—a fascinating one," Mrs. O'Connor said. And after her husband's death the hobby became an occupation.

Others speaking today include Marion Dilts, Barbara Nolen, Janice Holland, and Helen Nicolay.

The book fair is open from 8:30 a. m. to 5 p. m. today through Thursday, and Friday—final day—from 8:30 a. m. to 9 p. m. There is no admission charge and books are not sold at the fair.

Girl Faces Loss of Fingers, Toes—D. C. Doctors Study Case

By Harry Goodwin—The Washington Post
Peggy Jean Walker reads a book from her hospital bed

Perfectly at home in her hospital bed, a smiling, 10-year-old Alabama girl waits patiently while doctors here study her baffling malady.

The patient, Peggy Jean Walker, has been threatened since infancy with eventual loss of her fingers and toes. Their joints are disintegrating, casting off pieces of bone which work out through the tips of the fingers and toes.

So far, Peggy has lost one toe to ulceration and amputation, but nine of her fingers have been affected by the strange disease her doctors believe may be an obscure form of arthritis.

Peggy was brought to George Washington University Hospital last Thursday by her mother, Mrs. Isaac Walker, of Marvel, Ala. The daughter of a coal miner, her hospital expenses are being borne by the United Mine Workers welfare and retirement fund.

It may be an interesting case study for her doctors, but it's old stuff to Peggy. She's been in and out of hospitals periodically since the first blistering of a fingertip, at the age of 15 months. She suffers no pain, her mother said, except when a bone fragment breaks out through the top of a digit.

Faith Festival Of Protestants Steps Up Pace

Greater Washington's six-day Protestant preaching mission shifted into high gear yesterday.

In more than two-score meetings thousands of Protestants heard the call to revitalize their faith.

One of the highlights of the second-day activities was a noonday service which drew nearly 2000 to the Episcopal Church of the Epiphany, 1317 G st. nw.

The Rev. Robert J. McCracken, who opened the "Festival of Faith" at Uline Arena Sunday night, said: "The church's battle today is with practical atheism, with people who order their everyday life apart from God and as though He did not exist."

The minister of New York City's Riverside Church declared: "Christians have to do something infinitely harder than advance arguments, if the Christian cause is to make headway; their lives are to be arguments."

Several hundred persons attended a meeting at the Pentagon, addressed by the Rev. John Sutherland Bonnell, minister of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church, New York City.

At another meeting, Secretary of Agriculture Charles F. Brannan introduced the Rev. James W. Clarke, pastor of the Second Presbyterian Church, St. Louis, to more than 300 persons in the Department of Agriculture Auditorium.

Last night, 19 members of the 30-man mission preached in area churches.

The Rev. C. Andrew Lawson, the only Canadian in the mission, addressed a meeting at Bethesda Methodist Church. He is minister at Timothy Eaton Memorial Church, Toronto, Ontario.

The Rev. Ansley C. Moore, pastor of the Sixth Presbyterian Church, Pittsburgh, spoke at the Arlington Methodist Church.

At Shiloh Baptist Church the address was by the Rev. George D. Kelsey, associate secretary in Field Administration of the Federal Council of Churches.

The Rev. Shields T. Hardin, of the Baptist Church, East Orange, N. J., talked at the Georgetown Presbyterian Church.

The Rev. Norman W. Paullin, pastor of Baptist Temple, Philadelphia, was the speaker at St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Alexandria.

At Marvin Memorial Methodist Church, Silver Spring, the Rev. Perry E. Gresham, pastor of Central-Woodward Christian Church, Detroit, spoke.

The pastor of Holy Trinity Lutheran Church, the Rev. Ralph W. Loew, appeared at the Ninth Street Christian Church.

No Payoff Charged

Two Indicted In Threat to Race Bettor

A grand jury yesterday indicted two alleged gamblers on charges of threatening a horseplayer who told police the men refused to pay off on a bet when he won $150.

They are George Beal, 49, 724 31st st., se., and Frederick R. Murdock, jr., 26, 1336 Missouri ave., nw. Both men were also indicted on charges of setting up a gambling table in a poolroom at 937 9th st., nw., with John A. Tolson, 2918 M pl., se., and Hubert Schneider, 416 Newcomb st., se.

The four were arrested July 28, when John Ionesco, 56, 1016 10th st., nw., complained to police that he was unable to collect $150 in winnings from Beal and Murdock who, he said, threatened to beat him.

Two separate grand juries returned 36 indictments yesterday.

William B. (Pop) Cattell, 71, was indicted on a charge of taking indecent liberties with his eight-year-old granddaughter and her eight-year-old playmate. The incidents were said to have occurred September 16, in the basement and bedroom of Cattell's home, 3609 Brothers pl. se.

Toy Smith, 2421 18th st. nw., was indicted on a charge of taking indecent liberties with a seven-year-old girl on October 10 at the Walter Reed Antique Shop, 6640 Georgia ave. nw., where he is an employe.

A former Commerce Department messenger, William Byrd, 29, was indicted on a charge of destroying Government documents on January 30. Police said Byrd was given three packages to deliver to the Treasury Department but threw them in a Commerce Department trash can.

Clarence W. Satterwhite, 34, 652 6th st. ne., was indicted on five counts of arson. Police said he set fire to his own house five times from October, 1949, to August, 1950, to "scare his wife."

For the second week in a row a grand jury indicted a man for causing another to lose his eye. David Harris, 45, no fixed address, was indicted for mayhem and assault with a dangerous weapon. He is charged with striking Ernest Hambrick, 34, 810 M st. nw., in the eye with a broken bottle on September 19.

William Hightower, 32, 1816 Swann st. nw., already held for the action of the grand jury on a murder charge, was indicted yesterday on a charge of selling unlicensed narcotics.

$5500 Taken From Store Safe Owner Wasn't Sure He Locked

A safe, found locked and without a mark to show it had been entered, was looted of $5500 in cash at Super Freez, Inc., 723 11th st. nw., over the weekend.

The burglary was discovered yesterday morning, when employes found boxes of canned goods piled around the safe and the galvanized iron ripped off a skylight.

Proprietor Maurice Rosenfield first told police the safe was locked when the store was closed Saturday. He said later, however, that he wasn't positive the safe had been locked, since he had left the store hurriedly because of illness. He added that only he and another member of his family know the combination.

Police theorized the boxes were piled around the safe, either to deaden the noise when the burglars blew it open or to protect themselves from the blast. The burglars apparently changed plans, however, when they either found the safe unlocked or were able to work the combination, police said. Several hundred dollars in the store's cash register was left untouched.

It was the second time in about six months that the Super Freez store was robbed. Last April, Rosenfield, five employes and five customers were held up by two armed bandits, who got between $800 and $1000 of the store's funds and $35 from a customer.

D. C. to Keep Eye on Milk Sold to Va., Maryland

Arlington County Considering Ban Like Washington's On 'Outside' Supply

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

The District Health Department, previously claiming disinterest in milk for nearby Maryland and Virginia, yesterday disclosed that it will continue to keep an eye on milk sold by D. C. dairies in those two States.

Director of Food Inspection W. W. Burdette announced that the department will:

1. Insist that all "outside" milk coming from farms other than those inspected by the District be classified grade A by the state in which it orginates or by the United States Public Health Service.

2. Continue spot checks in the departmental laboratory on both milk from D. C. permit sources and other milk handled in local dairies.

The reason for the turnabout was given as a precaution in case the milk coming into the Washington plants should "accidentally get mixed up with D. C.-permit milk."

The District Commissioners decided last week that (1) starting Wednesday an eight-year-old open door on milk sold in the District will be closed except to that from D. C.-inspected farms and that (2) milk from other sources may be handled separately in the same Washington plants for sale to nearby Maryland and Virginia and units of the armed services.

Arlington May Act

Meanwhile, Arlington County, Va., following the lead of the District, is considering imposing a ban on sale of milk from farms other than those inspected by the District or the county, it was learned last night.

Dr. Ralph G. Beachley, Arlington health officer, said he will confer with County Manager A. T. Lundberg today on the District's decision to prohibit sale of so-called "outside" milk in Washington, starting Wednesday. Dr. Beachley said he favored a similar policy for the county.

The responsibility for ascertaining the quality of milk admitted for sale in Virginia is that of the individual health officers, C. B. Neblett, consultant milk sanitarian of the Virginia Department of Health, told The Washington Post from Richmond.

Health officials in nearby jurisdictions were considering the effect of this change. Up to now, they have taken the position generally that milk good enough for the District is good enough for sale to their residents.

Alexandria's Position

The Alexandria position is that milk must be rated grade A by the United States Public Health Service or the state in which it originates. Fairfax County requires that outside milk meet the same standards as that of Virginia-produced milk.

On the Maryland side, Prince Georges and Montgomery Counties require permits issued by the State Food and Drug Commissioner to out-of-state farms meeting standards up to Maryland's own. Reinhart Koch, Chief, Sanitation Division in Montgomery, said laboratory tests on milk samples will be continued.

In Washington papers are being processed for employment of four inspectors at $3200 a year each. They will be assigned to four Washington dairies to insure that there will be no commingling of the milk and will be on duty during all hours that the dairies process milk.

Family of 8 Evicted Despite Offer of Aid

A family of eight, including six children aged 2 to 14, were evicted from their six-room apartment in a low-cost housing project yesterday, although the Family Service Association offered to pay the $44 back rent they owe.

John Ihlder, executive director of the National Capital Housing Authority, said it was necessary to evict Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Naylor from their Fort Dupont apartment at 101 Ridge rd. ne., because "this has been going on since 1942."

Mrs. Vera Naylor said Herman Edwards, manager of the project, told her yesterday it was too late for the social service agency to take care of the back rent.

Rent Due Wednesday

Another $65 rental would have been due Wednesday, Ihlder said, in noting the family has been in arrears since last June. He said eviction was the next step when the Naylors failed to answer a summons to Municipal Court on October 20.

Mrs. Naylor, 36, said she misread the summons and thought she was supposed to appear November 1. The only eviction notice she got, she said, came last Thursday.

The housing director said Mrs. Naylor has lived in the same area almost 10 years and that the authority wrote off $120 in back rent she owed when her first husband deserted her and three children in 1942.

Naylor, a 35-year-old pipefitter's assistant at the Washington Terminal Co., said he was unable to pay the rent because of the expense of illness. He has been undergoing treatment for stomach ulcers, he said.

Illness Prevents Working

Ihlder reported Naylor's income was listed with the authority as $3400 a year. The evicted tenant said he averaged $57 a week, when working steadily. He has not worked at all in three weeks because of his stomach, he said.

"Because these people have children, we have tried everything possible to get them to keep up the $65 a month rent," Ihlder said, "but we decided it was hopeless this October."

The Naylors last night were worried about their furniture on the curbstone, and where to go. The children are temporarily at the three-room apartment of Mrs. Naylor's mother.

"Besides the six children, there are my mother, my brother, his wife and their baby in the apartment. They can't all stay there," Mrs. Naylor said last night.

4 Sex Convictions

Rest Station Closing Held Ineffective

The closing of public comfort stations at night has failed to cure homosexual offenses, Municipal Court Judge George D. Nielson said yesterday.

Eleven of the stations in parks operated by the Interior Department have been closed at night since October 22, following suggestions by Superintendent of Police Robert J. Barrett and Assistant U. S. Attorney Warren Wilson.

"You might as well close the park sas the comfort stations," Judge Nielson said. "These people are just committing sex crimes in the parks now."

The judge's comment came after four men had been convicted of charges of soliciting for immoral purposes in public parks, where the comfort stations were closed.

Francis L. Collins, 47, 127 B st. se., pleaded guilty to the charge and was sentenced to pay a fine of $100 or serve 90 days in jail. He had not paid at the end of the court day.

Jimmie McCormick, 35, 1650 New Jersey ave., was convicted and sentenced to pay a fine of $50 or serve 60 days. He, too, had not paid.

George Kin Leung, 51, 6423 MacArthur blvd. nw., pleaded guilty and paid a $50 fine.

Lloyd Winston Elliott, 38, 835 Gist ave., Silver Spring, Md., pleaded guilty and was released under $800 bond. His case was referred to the probation office for presentence investigation.

Two Cleared, Third Held In Slayings

Two men were cleared and a third held for grand jury action on a murder charge at coroner's inquests yesterday in three recent deaths.

The jury freed Sam Motton, 38, of 1329 11th st. nw., in the death of Moses Williams, 41, of 908 3d st. nw., which was termed accidental. Williams died at Freedmen's Hospital Saturday of a fractured skull, suffered October 20 when he fell 14 feet to a concrete court from a roof at the 11th street address during a struggle with Motton.

Testimony at the inquest yesterday showed that while the two were struggling, Williams started to fall backward and Motton released his hold on the man so he wouldn't be pulled over the edge.

The jury also freed Alfred Windear, 55, of 1336 Sixth st. nw., in the fatal stabbing Saturday night of his nephew, Frederick Windear, 20, also of the Sixth st. address, on the ground of justifiable homicide.

Witnesses testified the nephew, who had been drinking, broke down the door of Windear's room because the older man wouldn't lend him two dollars. Windear stabbed the nephew with a butcher knife in self-defense, the jury ruled.

Held for action of the grand jury was John Parker, jr., 36, of 1851 Kendall st ne., charged in the fatal shooting of Elderly Lee Brown, 24, of 4906 Benning rd. ne. early Saturday.

Witnesses testified at the inquest that Parker went out, returned with a gun and shot Brown after the latter tried to intercede in an argument between Parker and another man during a dice game at 1841 Kendall st. ne.

Winers-Diners Sup To Utter Satiation

By Melvin Altshuler
Post Reporter

A dozen gentlemen who are determined to eat well—being members all of the Washington Winers and Diners—sat down to a supper last night.

It was a seven-course, six-wine, many-appetizers sort of supper, accompanied by conversation concerning food, wine, and the pauper-poor state of eating in Washington restaurants.

"Now we're not connoisseurs" warned Diners' President Brandan B. Shea, passing out the first type of sherry.

It turned out to be a California sherry as the prelude to a Syrian —at least generally Near East— dinner.

"We're merely curious about food," Shea explained, passing the second variety of sherry about.

Wine Flavored With Pine

And as he handed around chilled Retsina—a Greek wine (Greek wines being up for consideration) —Shea explained the club has been in existence a year and had three dinners before the experiment in Near East cuisine.

Retsina turned out to be a white wine, flavored with pine.

To all but a few of the dozen members — most of them Foreign Service or Army officers with a taste for foreign food — the Retsina tasted a bit strange, as did the similarly flavored Red Roditys. Members who have visited Greece were used to the pine flavor.

"Goes very well with the appetizers, you'll find," another diner said. (The appetizers included: parsley with sesame sauce, mashed chickpeas with lemon juice and sesame, mashed eggplant with sesame sauce, goat cheese and raw lamb and beef mixed with cracked wheat and onions.)

"Let me explain 'validity' of food," said Frederick Todd, first president. (His remark came somewhere after the chicken-lentil soup—Bagdad-style and the semi-dry Greek wine served with it.) "Food must be 'valid.' That is, it must be prepared honestly according to the country it represents. Secondly, it must be basically good food. Third—I should say most important—it must taste good to you."

The proprietor of the chosen restaurant came about the same time as the Red Roditys was served—with the lamb. (Lamb on skewers; lamb mixed with spices —also mushrooms in a sauce, a heavy salad, and a mixture of rice and pine nuts that Todd pronounced "most excellent.")

But the heavy pastry, served with the sweet Mauro Daphne wine, produced a sort of problem: what kind of coffee?

"How many will have American coffee and how many Turkish coffee?" Shea asked.

Todd called for a show of hands, and Turkish coffee was the choice unanimously.

"That," said Shea, "is what I like to see."

Man Is Henpecked by Wife, Who Comes of Wealthy Home, Because He Seems Unable to Invest Wisely And Build a Fortune; He's Amassed Modest Backlog

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I write in the hope that you will discuss this letter in your column, so that I may show the article to my wife. Then maybe she will stop harping on the theme that other men seem to be doing so well, while I don't seem to get ahead financially. I don't believe she understands how well I have been doing. Perhaps your opinions might help to enlighten her.

Fern and I were married 15 years ago, and we have one child. Fern came from a wealthy home, but I was determined that we should live on my salary, which was small but not adequate to her wants. I have made around ten thousand dollars annually for some years; and we have been saving some thirty-five hundred dollars annually in these days of high taxes and high costs of living, which I think is pretty good.

Today, after 15 years' marriage, we have a net worth of about fifty thousand dollars. That isn't much, but the only defense I have against Fern's hints about my inability to invest wisely and build up a fortune, is that I have done better than many another man.

When I compare myself with men who were in college with me, I see only two or three who have done better. However, this doesn't appease Fern, and maybe you have a better argument to use on her.

Lots of people have larger, more beautiful homes than ours, but I believe they have bigger mortgages too; and on the basis of statistics I have seen, I think we aren't doing badly, but my wife insists that we are. What do you think? Are my ideas cockeyed? J. D.

DEAR J. D.: A wife with a thankless complaining air isn't much of an inducement to a man to do great things. Her anxious nagging is a driving force along the road to monetary success only accidentally, if at all. She may make him irritably intent on staying away from her as much as possible, plausibly.

In this resistant mood, a henpecked husband may give a great deal more time, thought and energy to his job, or to the doings of the market place, than he would if his wife were a companionable person with whom he could really live, and enjoy the experience, in leisure left over from earning a modest maintenance. As a result of his daily flight into the woods of big business for escapist reasons, he may eventually lay hold on big money—either by job advancement, or by a smart invention, or a clever investment at the psychological moment, or what-not. But in such case, is his marriage any happier, or his wife more "secure," than before? I think not.

Big money annexed by that joyless approach is apt to boomerang on the nagging wife, and give her something more and worse to worry about; because the first luxury her husband may bargain and duel for, is release from her. Although Fern's type of woman may think she wants money as the best form of security, what she really craves is a parent-host, as the parasite does. She wants to take her "security" from another's life, or energies or character. And she asks that person to provide a guaranteed source of supply, on her terms, to last her a lifetime. She feels entitled to this, and takes an injured attitude if it isn't forthcoming.

In my judgment, Fern needs you, a patient tolerant husband—who takes her fretting in stride as a nursemaid might, —a great deal more than she needs negotiable treasure in stocks, bonds and folding money.

Her carping at you for not building a fortune is infantile yapping. It doesn't make sense, realistically, coming from an ablebodied female of adult years and presumably rational faculties. It is a form of whimpering, an admission of fearful self-concern that issues from her hidden awareness of totally dependent immaturity of character. And it reveals indirectly that she doesn't know what is good for her.

When a person's attitude toward money or material possessions is ever "More, more; give me more," there is no use trying to dispute the phobia in economist's language, with the argument of statistics. If the fever of avarice is to be dissolved in the light of reason, that illuminates the wisdom of "the golden mean," or moderate appetite, you must turn that person's attention to the source of his dismay—namely, his neurotic maladjustment to the fact that life is essentially insecure. When you accept the fact that to be alive is to be insecure, and that death is the only escape from it, life appeals as an experience to be explored, not sold out to dollar-chasing. My advice to Fern is to come to terms with inner insecurity, and start "living" with you in the time left to her. M. H.

Experiment Betty

Great Expectations Bring Woes

(First Day of Betty's Beauty Program)

By Ann Lawrence

BETTY'S BABY is due in January.

Through November, she will continue to hold down an office job and do all her own housework as well. For pennies count more than ever now in Betty's household. But because her general health is excellent, her doctor has given his approval to this strenuous program.

Thus, added to the normal problems of looking neat, fresh and well-groomed during pregnancy, Betty has the extra burden of looking well and staying well on the job.

Waiting for the baby to come could be a lot of fun, Betty decided. The pleasant anticipation and curiosity would add space to her days.

BUT THE FIRST TIME she looked into a mirror and found her face pale, her hair stringy, she felt a slight twinge of despair. Her back had started to ache, her feet to swell. There was that maddening little bulge just below her waist that none of her clothes could conceal. No matter how eagerly she looked forward to motherhood, the troubles endured in achieving that blessed state seemed just a little too much at the moment.

That was the moment at which she, like all pregnant women, needed to plan her campaign, for energy may fail in the last few months. To rush into a shop and pick up "some little something" to wear to a party is an impossibility. It won't seem worth the trouble and you'll probably spend the evening at home feeling sorry for yourself. (If you do not buy your clothes early and plan what beauty and grooming items you will need to keep your looks, the chances are that you won't get them at all. Toward the end, when time is short, the larger expenses at hand may make looking well seem of minor importance.)

CONSIDERING THE MATTER theoretically, the only changes in appearance is an enlarging abdomen. Becoming clothes can minimize this. Your hair can be just as well dressed, your hands as well cared for, and most important of all, your face can be as attractive as ever before.

Unfortunately, this is not always the case. All too many women take the attitude that since they cannot look their best, they might just as well look their worst.

First, Betty had to learn that to look well, she had to make every effort to feel well. She couldn't forget that looking well is also one of the most important aids to feeling well. Everyone knows that last year's dress is 100 percent more becoming if you have had a good night's rest. But this is particularly important to the woman who is going to have a baby.

NEVER PERMIT YOURSELF to become exhausted, was to be Betty's cardinal rule. She was to learn the art of pampering herself, despite her many responsibilities. Cushions, at home and in the office, cups of tea and a short before-dinner nap, would make life a lot more pleasant, and help to keep that tired, glazed look out of her eyes.

A planned wardrobe of becoming maternity clothes, an intelligent program of beauty care could make her look well, could make her first pregnancy a short and happy experience, rather than endless, dreary one.

TOMORROW: Your feet need pampering.

BETTY

Beauty On a Budget

BETTY, whose baby is due in January, is also holding down a full-time office job, as long as her doctor permits. She must look neat and well-groomed during pregnancy, as well as fresh and attractive on the job.

With Ann Lawrence, Betty planned carefully so that her strenuous schedule could include a daily program of beauty care. And because pennies count in Betty's household, she had to budget her maternity wardrobe to see her through home and office appearances. At the left you see Betty in a hand-me-down maternity dress and a make-shift hair-do, before the start of her beauty counseling.

Spice of Life Appeals To Male Cook, but He Needs a Few Directions

ADDING A BIT OF SPICE to his cookery is the aim of a masculine reader who writes as follows:

KIND LADY:

Will you please advise me as to where I can get full instructions, etc., as to how to use the various spices in general cooking?

W. T., Washington.

There's a new book out on this subject, a small inexpensive one called "The Spice Sampler," written by Edith Barber, Food Editor of the late New York Sun. It's available in most book stores and even contains a set of small envelopes containing spices in the front of the book. Another idea for you would be to write to companies packaging spices and ask for their leaflets on the use of their products. You can get names and addresses from packages or advertisements.

DEAR ANNE:

How can carved ivory elephants be properly cleaned without discoloring the ivory?

H. L. B., Fort Belvoir, Va.

Wipe them off with a clean cloth moistened in denatured alcohol. Washing with soap is to be particularly avoided as it darkens ivory.

DEAR ANNE:

I have recently made some shower curtains since I was under the impression I had seen advertised somewhere kits for installing grommets—the metal rings at the top of the curtains. However, since then I haven't found a store that carries such a kit. Nor have I found an awning shop that will do the job for me. Any suggestions? Mrs. G. N., Kensington, Md.

Tips on finding grommet kits will be appreciated, readers.

DEAR ANNE:

Can you give me a recipe for a good, creamy, soft caramel icing? W. L. T., Washington.

CARAMEL ICING

2 cups firmly packed brown sugar
1 cup commercially soured cream few grains salt
1 teaspoon vanilla

Stir cream into sugar and add salt. Place on fire, and continue stirring until sugar is completely dissolved. Boil until small quantity forms a soft ball when dropped into cold water (236 degrees Fahrenheit on a candy thermometer.) Remove from the heat and cool, without stirring, to body temperature. Add vanilla and beat until smooth. If frosting stiffens while spreading, place over hot water to keep it soft.

Anne answers questions through her column only. Address letters to "Anne," Room 408, The Washington Post, Washington 4, D. C. Names and addresses of questioners will be used, unless specifically requested otherwise.

NATO Chieftains Feted Again

By Marie McNair and Elizabeth Maguire

DEFENSE MINISTERS and military chiefs again took the lead yesterday in Capital entertainment. Embassy dinners and a stag cocktail party were given as a wind-up to final meetings of the representatives to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

THE BELGIAN AMBASSADOR, Baron Silvercruys, received at dinner last evening on the occasion of the meetings in Washington of the Defense Committee of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. Besides the United States Chiefs of Staff and their wives, high ranking Government members and White House officials were present.

Guests also included the Belgian Minister of Defense, the Belgian Chiefs of Staff, the Belgian representative on the Council of Deputies and the Belgian representative on the North Atlantic supply board.

BEFORE THE DINNER, a stag cocktail party was given by the Belgian Military and Air Attache, Maj. Count Yvan Du Monceau de Bergendal, at his residence, from 5:30 to 7:30 p. m. Col. de Greef, Defense Minister of Belgium; Gen. Etienne Baele, Chief of Staff of the Belgian Army; and Maj. Gen. Lucien Leboutte, Chief of Staff of the Belgian Air Force, were honor guests.

COL. FERNANDO SANTOS COSTA, Defense Minister of Portugal, was honored at a stag dinner given at the Portuguese Embassy by the Ambassador, Luis Esteves Fernandes. Among the guests were Undersecretary of State James E. Webb, and Assistant Secretary of Defense Wilfred J. McNeil.

Others included Admiral Leon Huffman; Lord Tedder, chairman, British Joint Services Mission; Gen. Paul Ely, French representative of the standing group of NATO; Homer Byington of the State Department; Gen. Anibal Passos Sousa, chief of Portuguese Armed Forces; Gen. Alfredo Santos Sintra, and Lieut. Col. Luis Camara Pina.

Catholic U. Presents A Wise Madwoman

By Richard L. Coe

WHILE THE PRODUCTION kept reminding me of a Super-special out of Metro by Technicolor, Catholic University's "The Madwoman of Chaillot" is well worth a visit from those who've not seen this expressive, imaginative play.

Jean Giraudoux' fascinating lines had no professional hearing in this laggard outpost, closing before it could be booked into last spring's Gayety season. Though disappointed by the present version, I've an idea it's probably the best this area is likely to see, though I mean this as no crack about future amateur performances.

For it is always difficult, especially with the first of the group's seasonal offerings, to remember that our foremost university players are not professionals. Whatever their aplomb and exactness, these players, whose ranks change yearly, are giving us school productions and one's reactions to them must include that perspective.

"The Madwoman of Chaillot" is, as the CU program notes, "a fable" about how an ancient eccentric of Paris upsets the plottings of a big rich syndicate to destroy the city for a world of oil beneath it. It is a biting indictment of the greedy and the evil whose machinations make human life so needlessly erratic. It is a sparkling story flashing with wit and compassion.

So far as I could tell this idea and the heart of the play did seem to get across to the large opening night audience; therefore, on one basis at least, the current offering is a success and will find admirers.

However, it is a fussy performance Alan Schneider has directed. James D. Waring's settings, for instance, are literal. His Paris street is a postcard Paris, stretching beyond the with of the stage. His cellar room for the Madwoman is deep and dank, far below, one expects, the famed sewers; in that one his staircase confines all the action to one side of the stage. Physically, it is a heavy picture Waring paints, heavy when it should have been light.

The first act, when we meet the Countess, the villains and the good people, makes the same error; hordes of characters form an orchestration; it is a visual symphony. What was required was shimmering simplicity. Curiously enough, Alfred de Liagre's New York production was similarly contrasted with the Paris original by those who saw both. For the counterpoint in the script is truly difficult to stage. Bearing in mind the comparative failure of the early scenes of the American professional production, Director Schneider probably was justified in trying another approach; this sprawling one, however, is a bit much.

Dr. Callan Saves the Day

For its over-proportions carry over to the performances, which all are broad, literal; hence, not imaginative nor delicate. I'm thinking of the Madwoman's wonderful speech on the joyful pleasures of her simple day, of the over-harsh approach to Mme. Constance and the dog she didn't bring with her, of the lack of contrast, both in costume and the playing, between Constance and Gabrielle, of the over-crowded effects of the final scene where there is so much to look at one misses what is being said.

The demanding title role, Countess Aurelia, is in the finest hands the university affords, Dr. Josephine McGarry Callan, whose gallant sportsmanship at tackling such a role in addition to her staff duties has made this production possible. As she always has in the past, Dr. Callan merits the university's gratitude.

Of the others, I thought Pat Atkinson's Mme. Josephine, the legal eagle of the madwomen, the finest, superior, even, to the playing the role got on Broadway. Bill Callahan is the speechmaking ragpicker and to Diane Shane falls some of the evening's loveliest lines, Irma's heartfilling soliloque at the end of Act I.

As I say, this production of Maurice Valency's effective adaptation is too rich for a fable's simplicity, but if you're unfamiliar with one of the finest plays of recent years, you should see "The Madwoman of Chaillot" for yourself. It will continue on the university campus through November 11.

"THE MADWOMAN OF CHAILLOT." The speech and drama department of Catholic University presents the play by Jean Giraudoux, adapted by Maurice Valency. Settings and lighting by James D. Waring. Costumes designed by Joseph Lewis, executed by Anne Tacik. Musical supervision by Edward Cashman. Directed by Alan Schneider. At the University Theater on the campus through November 11.

GERRY WAGNER, the Playhouse-Dupont-Little buddha, gleefully announces from his Georgetown Hospital bed that "Trio" will be shown at the Playhouse in mid-November . . . There's been a lot of bidding for this one, with the success of "Quartet" making many houses anxious to latch on to this new Maugham collection.

"ONE OF EXPERIENCE" writes the most understandably anonymous letter of the week, pointing out to this column its "too masculine approach" to the problem of Keith's late "Outrage." The writer observes that she had exactly the same experience as the heroine of this story, whose reactions I so disbelieved. . . . "On the contrary," this correspondent remarks, "her reactions were the truest thing about the picture; the real criticism is that it ends too happily for the girl to be realistic."

Dugan Renews Bid For Redistricting To Aid Arlington

Arlington County Board Chairman Daniel A. Dugan yesterday again asked State Sen. Charles R. Fenwick to support a county board request for a special session of the Virginia General Assembly in 1951.

The board asked a special redistricting session to give Arlington two more State delegates. Fenwick said the Virginia Constitution prohibited reapportionment until 1952.

Dugan said yesterday that "a special session in 1951 could readily enact a reapportionment plan that would be effective in 1952."

Sewage Plan Hitch Seen In Annexation

Annexation of 7½ square miles of Fairfax County land by the City of Alexandria would arise several "difficulties" in financing and operating sewage facilities in the area, according to the county sanitary engineer.

The engineer, James J. Corbalis, was the chief witness for the county yesterday in the annexation suit before a three-judge tribunal in the Fairfax County Circuit Court.

Corbalis said the annexation would take 7.2 square miles of the county's 30-square-mile Sanitary District No. 1. If Falls Church won its annexation appeal, that would take an additional 6.9 square miles of the sewage district, he said.

He testified that 78 percent of a $3 million sewerage program for which the county had issued bonds is earmarked for construction in the nondisputed section of the sanitary district.

But only 43 percent of assessed valuation and 33 percent of current revenue would remain in the section not involved in annexation proceedings, he declared.

Corbalis said the sanitary district would be left as a "very disjointed area to work with," as there would be two Fairfax County sections divided by a strip of Alexandria.

The county would have to take care of sewage disposal for the entire trunk line and would not have control over operation and maintenance of the Alexandria section, he said.

Following Corbalis' direct testimony, court was recessed until 10 a. m. today, when attorneys for Alexandria expect to cross-examine him.

After the court was recessed, the three judges, Paul E. Brown of Fairfax, Jeff Walter of Accomac and Walter T. McCarthy of Arlington, toured the proposed annexation area.

Soviet Chief Rejects 2 Austrian Protests

VIENNA, Oct. 30 (U.P.).—Gen. V. P. Sviridov, Soviet high commissioner to Austria, rejected two Austrian notes protesting Soviet interference with internal Austrian matters today as "without basis."

The government had protested such Russian interference as the ordered withdrawal of police reinforcements during recent Communist riots and the blocking by the Soviets of the dismissal of Communist police chiefs in the Russian sector of Vienna.

Auto Finance Firm to Offer Shares Today

By S. Oliver Goodman

Government Employes Corp., auto finance firm organized last year, today will formally offer an additional 30,000 common shares.

Stockholders of record at the close of business today will receive rights to subscribe to the new issue at $10 a share on the basis of one share for each old share owned. The transferable rights will expire at 3 p. m. on November 20. In the over-the-counter market, the corporation's stock was quoted at $53 a share bid.

Proceeds of the new issue will be used for additional capital funds to finance the rapidly growing business, according to President Leo Goodwin.

The finance firm, affiliated with the Government Employees Insurance Co., was organized in October, 1949, and started business on January 13, 1950. Up to August 31, 1950, the firm had made loans of $2,082,368 to 1664 borrowers and on that date had notes receivable of $1,811,054.

For the period ended August 31, the firm reports consolidated net income of $23,326 after reserve for taxes.

LEAGUE MEETING: Election of officers and presentation of a Treasury award will highlight tonight's annual dinner meeting of the D. C. Building and Loan League in the Shoreham Hotel. Fred A. Smith, president, and other league officers are scheduled to be elected for a second term following usual league custom. Edward C. Baltz, chairman of the District Savings Bond Division, will present the Treasury's award of merit to the league for cooperation in the savings bond program, particularly during the independence drive.

GROWTH: The dramatic growth of the air transport industry in the past 20 years was emphasized yesterday by J. H. Carmichael, president of Capital Airlines. Just two decades ago, he pointed out, the entire airline business in this country employed 1451 persons and carried only 48,000 passengers in one year. Today, Carmichael said, Capital Airlines alone employs 1600 persons in Washington and carries 1½ million passengers a year. He spoke before a luncheon meeting of the aviation committee of the Washington Board of Trade in the Burlington Hotel. The committee presented Carmichael with a citation commemorating Capital Airline's pioneering of air-coach service two years ago. Howard Drake, committee chairman, presided.

Carmichael

ANOTHER VIEW: The United States Savings and Loan League said yesterday there is nothing so far to indicate that the mortgage restrictions are "either unreasonable or extreme in view of the apparent necessity of apportioning materials between home building and the war effort." Commenting upon the recently invoked Regulation X, Harry Bubb, president of the league, said that under the present plan "we have good grounds for hope that we will not see a revival of the direct Government construction limitation orders of World War II which bred gray markets and made a farce of price controls."

PEPCO NET OFF: A larger provision for Federal income taxes and increased depreciation charges resulted in lower net income for Potomac Electric Power Co. in September and the first nine months, despite an upturn in operating revenues. Net income for the month totaled $193,418, and for the nine months aggregated $3,215,096. The nine-month figure was 12.78 percent less than the like 1949 period. Operating revenues were up 4.94 percent, while total operating costs (including depreciation and taxes) were up 5.72 percent during the nine-month period. The declining earnings trend has resulted in a plea for higher rates, which the Public Utilities Commission currently is weighing.

IMPROVEMENT: National Airlines, Inc., yesterday reported net income of $181,007, equal to 18 cents a share for the three months ended September 30. This compares with a deficit of $521,312 in the same 1949 period. Revenue passenger miles increased 42 percent and air freight was surged 159 percent.

EARNINGS: Parke, Davis & Co., makers of more than 1400 drugs, reported record net income of $13,545,669 for the first nine months this year, compared with $9,352,620 in same 1949 period. Net was equal to $2.77 a share this year, against $1.91 a share in same period last year. Other earnings statements on a per share basis follow:

New York Cotton

NEW YORK, Oct. 30 (AP).—Cotton futures closed $1.50 to $2.30 a bale lower today, with final prices at the lowest for the day. The market was on the defensive from the start, as mills were inclined to cover future contracts only on the scale down. This encouraged scattered liquidation, with hedge selling against the new crop movement adding to the pressure.

I SAID NO—MA SAID YES
That's why I'm selling—so bring on your kids, your pets and the whole family as there is really room to spread out in this house, as it has ½ acre of ground; close to bus service and shopping.
Solidly built frame and Bricktex construction, with large kitchen, dining room, bath, living room and 2 bedrooms on 3rd floor; wonderful new stove and refrigerator goes with the sale. Hot air heat with filter system, the kind that is so economical to use.
Upstairs you have separate rooms for the kiddies and the basement is dry as a bone, outside entrance to a lovely yard where you won't have to worry while your children are playing.
Oh yes, there's a garage where you can park the average man's car without beming and hawin.
There is a catch and the catch is that you must have $3000 down and be able to pay at least $78 per month for a substantially fair priced home—$10,750.
Call Ma or me and we will be glad to have you inspect this property. Phone Al., 6644 or TE. 7343.

Men, Letters and History

Ever since Benedict Arnold's signature on the plans of West Point were found in Major Andre's boot, letters have been an important factor in American politics. Letters, politically, are a permanent confession; letters, legally, are the strongest kind of evidence. They constitute admissions—and an admission of fact is to the trial court what a right cross to the jaw is to the prize ring.

The lethal quality of letters was recognized early; indeed, the political strategists were not above the use of decoys in order to secure them. For example, among the most celebrated incidents in United States history is the Sackville-West affair. In September of 1888, the Republican leadership was extremely anxious to swing the so-called "Irish vote" against President Grover Cleveland. They figured if it could be demonstrated he was friendly to Great Britain, that would turn the trick.

Accordingly, a letter was sent to the British Ambassador, Lord Sackville-West, signed by a Charles F. Murchison. Murchison stated he was a naturalized Englishman and asked Lord Sackville-West for advice on how to vote in the American election. Without the slightest suspicion that he was stepping into a trap, the British Ambassador wrote Murchison a letter stating that he thought Cleveland was more friendly to Great Britain than Harrison. The Herald Trib broke the story by publishing the letter with the caption: "The British Lion's Paw Thrust Into American Politics to Help Cleveland." Cleveland in a fury demanded that His Majesty's government relieve Sackville-West from duty—but the damage was done. Though Cleveland received a Nation-wide majority, Harrison was carried by his majority of 12,000 in N. Y. State into the White House.

The British never forgot the incident. In the 1944 campaign, Lord Halifax was asked by a heckler at a public meeting: "If you were an American citizen—would you vote for Roosevelt or Dewey?" . . . "My friend," Halifax purred, "if you will make me an American citizen, I shall begin to form opinions on matters which are none of my business now."

Perhaps no letter in American history has had the impact of one written by George F. Baer, president of the Philadelphia & Reading R. R. during the first great coal strike in 1902. By enraging the country, it literally set off the whole wave of social reform and gave labor unions their first foothold on American public opinion and started in ascendancy the star of President Theodore Roosevelt. With the country in the grip of a great coal strike, William F. Clark, a very religious man of Wilkes-Barre, wrote Baer as leader of the coal operators, urging him to stop the internal strife in the name of God . . . Baer wrote back: "I beg of you not to be discouraged. The rights and interests of laboring men will be protected by the men to whom God in His wisdom has given the control of the property interests of the country."

The New York Times broke the letter—with the notation that "it seemed to verge very close upon unconscious blasphemy." William R. Hearst observed that "the pious pirate is no new thing. Baer and the relations between a just God and the thieving trusts must be left to the pulpit for adequate treatment." The clergy did just that. Baer was denounced in all the churches. The New York Churchman, Protestant Episcopalian, said Baer's letter was a "ghastly blasphemy." The Boston Watchman, a Baptist publication, stated: "The doctrine of the divine right of kings was bad enough, but not as rotten as the doctrine of the divine right of plutocrats to administer things in general with the prescription that what it pleases them to do is the will of God."

With the country in a furor over the Baer letter, the young man in the White House set the pattern for the Roosevelt tradition-shattering pattern. In one of the most extraordinary scenes in our history, he called General Schofield of the U. S. Army at midnight. Carefully, he asked General Schofield if he would regard him as Commander-in-Chief under all circumstances. Schofield became very grave as he listened, because a United States officer takes his oath to the Constitution—not to the President. Fipally Schofield said he would. President Roosevelt then ordered him as Commander-in-Chief to be ready on a half hour's notice—to have the troop trains leave Washington to seize the coal mines—to hold the mines until further orders—and to defy the U. S. Supreme Court if an injunction was issued!

But it wasn't necessary. The operators caved in before the rage of the public. George Baer's letter had started organized labor and Theodore Roosevelt on their way to sweeping power.

Intercepted letters have had more effect on world history than any other single factor. As a few examples, George Washington would have been removed as Commander-in-Chief of the Colonial forces—if the Conway Cabal hadn't been exposed by publishing Conway's conspiratorial letters to Gates . . . Aaron Burr's notorious cypher letter to General Wilkinson—asking him to seize New Orleans—was intercepted—and Burr's first notice was the publishing of it on the front page of the newspapers . . . Modern Germany was started by Bismarck's famed editing of the Kaiser's telegram from Ems, turning a courteous note into the inflammatory document which started the Franco-Prussian War.

The plain fact is that nine tenths of all modern intelligence effort is directed toward "penetrating" the enemy's communications.

This story has never been published before, but there are top Intelligence officers who swear it is true. It could be called—what broke the mind of Rudolf Hess. When Rudolf Hess dropped from his plane into Scotland, he was quickly taken into custody. He was arrogant as only a Nazi war lord could be and asked that Winston Churchill be notified that he was in England to keep their appointment—and he would speak with no one else; as a chieftain, he had the right to speak only to chieftains. "You are here at Mr. Churchill's request?" asked the suave British Intelligence chief . . . "Yes," said Hess impatiently. "Here is his signed letter" . . . "Very interesting," said the British Intelligence man, crisply. "In fact, the best forgery I have ever seen" . . . Hess went white as a ghost . . . "Himmler," he said hoarsely, "Himmler has tricked me—and I shall never be able to explain to the Fuehrer." Then every vein in his head stood out in such a monumental rage that he collapsed. When he came out of it, he was insane. He scarcely ever uttered a word thereafter.

But as Himmler placed the poison pill in his mouth to kill himself, five years later, he knew history had given Hess the last bitter laugh, though Hess was too insane to know it. Because, by betraying Hess and causing his insanity, Himmler had saved the life of the man he hated most!

Winnebagos Taking To Legal Warpath

SPARTA, Wisc., Oct. 31 (AP).—The Winnebago Indian nation was prepared today to take the legal warpath against the Federal Government for settlemen of an ancient debt.

Five Winnebagos signed legal papers before county Judge Lambert Hansen, who then authenticated their signatures. The Rev. Mitchell White Rabbit of Black River Falls said this enabled the Indians to retain attorneys to present their case before the United States Court of Claims in Washington, D. C., in an amount that would range from 15 million dollars to 80 million dollars "plus interest."

FCC Asks End Of Suit by RCA Over Color TV

CHICAGO, Oct. 30 (U.P.).—The Federal Communications Commission today asked dismissal of an injunction filed by Radio Corporation of America to prevent adoption of the Columbia Broadcasting System's color television setup.

Special Assistant Attorney General John F. Baecher filed in Federal Court a motion for a summary judgment of dismissal on grounds the FCC order is valid in all respects.

The motion said RCA and its affiliate, National Broadcasting Co., are not entitled to damages or legal relief. It said that they failed to show that they would suffer financial loss through adoption of the CBS "mechanical system."

Arguments on the dismissal motion will be heard November 14.

Federal Judge Philip L. Sullivan granted CBS the right to intervene when attorneys for RCA voiced no objections. Sullivan then set November 14 for a hearing of the injunction suit by a three-judge court composed of himself, United States District Judge Walter J. Labuy and Chief Judge J. Earle Major of the United States appelate court here.

In its petition to intervene, CBS said it has spent four million dollars on its color system and anticipates "substantial revenue of many millions." It said sponsors already have expressed interest, and that contracts with sponsors are expected to be signed by November 20, when CBS is scheduled to begin color telecasts under the controversial FCC order.

TV Problems Called Government-Imposed

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Oct. 30 (U.P.).—Dr. Allen B. Du Mont said tonight that all the major problems of the television industry are Government imposed—"cold shadows cast by the parasitic structures of Federal bureaucracy."

Addressing the fall convention of the Institute of Radio Engineers and the Radio-Television Manufacturers Association, Du Mont reviewed what he considers the major problems of the television industry and outlined his views on the proposed excess-profits tax.

The president of Allen B. Du Mont Laboratories, Inc., called the go-ahead for CBS color television at this time "an arbitrary and hasty decision injurious to the public and the industry."

"The major point which I want to make is that industry leaders and technical experts have been disregarded by the FCC in its color decision affecting industry and the public welfare. That, to me, is the greatest problem of the industry," he said.

Business Failures Decline

Business failures in September declined 18 percent to 648, the lowest level since January, 1949, according to Dun & Bradstreet, Inc. All industry and trade groups had a smaller number of casualties than in August.

Schenley Buys Plant

NEW YORK, Oct. 30 (AP).—Schenley Distillers, Inc., announced today the purchase of a former defense plant corporation industrial facility at Kansas City, Mo. Schenley will restore the 15-acre property as an alcohol manufacturing unit.

Now, Let's Get Rid Of Studio Audience

By John Crosby

THE OTHER NIGHT Arthur Godfrey told the customers not to buy television sets until color sets, or at least, color converters are available. This advice, naturally, comes to you via CBS, which is on the color bandwagon. However, CBS out of town happens to be on any TV station that evists there, and not all of them are entirely happy about color. Then Zeke Manners, an ABC property, told essentially the same group of listeners to ignore Godfrey's advice and go out and buy a black-and-white TV set if they felt like it.

Crosby

This is the first time in my memory when an entertainer has advised people not to buy something. It is especially intriguing when you consider that the object Arthur is telling us not to buy is the one that earns his living. My own advice is to go ahead and buy a present set; you'll get your money's worth out of it during the life of the set. However, I recognize there is room for argument. And you might as well be warned that you are going to hear a lot of arguments from other entertainers on the same subject, all trying to muddy the waters as thoroughly as possible.

It might be well to keep in mind that no advice you hear on television is likely to be disinterested. CBS is committed to broadcast color pretty soon and, naturally, it would like to have an audience for its colorcasts. So the CBS entertainers are going to tell you to hold back until color is available; the NBC crowd, which is violently opposed to CBS color, is going to urge you to buy right now, when black and white is all that is available.

If you hear it on the air ,take it with a grain of salt—no matter which side of the question is being advanced.

THE STUDIO AUDIENCE has even less business in television than it did in radio—and it had no business there. But at least in radio, the audience had nothing between it and the comedian except a microphone. In television the stage is cluttered with cameras and technicians and cables. The audience has a terrible time seeing anything and the comedian has a terrible time wringing a laugh out of an audience that is so far removed from him.

As Peter Lind Hayes once said of his former program, "Inside U. S. A.": "Our show is just a rumor to the audience."

My chief complaint is not that the audience is not getting much of a show but that the directors and producers are criminally wasting space which they badly need. You don't realize what a terrible handicap an audience is until you see a show which hasn't got an audience, like the "Paul Whiteman Revue."

Whiteman has an enormous amount of space at his command and he uses all of it. The Whiteman show has great depth and pictorial value even when Mel Torme, a recent guest, is singing a song. There is movement and space and people behind the singer; an environment is created and a mood is established. I'm willing to admit that a popular song isn't worth so much enterprise, but the Whiteman show reveals the potentialities this medium has.

If you have an audience, you have to get a burst of applause for the singers and the acrobats. The comedian has to get laughs. You have to get a response out of that audience because that's what it's there for. And every bit of response and every bit of energy devoted toward getting that response is time wasted as far as you and I, the home audience, is concerned.

Now We'll Find Out If 'Justice Is Blind'

Marjorie Hackett of the Hyattsville High School writes:

"The teachers and students of Hyattsville High School would like to invite you to be a judge at a beauty contest to be held at the school on Monday, November 20, 8 p. m. There will be approximately 100 girls, and one of the five judges will be Mr. Charles Justice."

I will be happy to accept this assignment to serve with Judge Justice. If Charlie ever gets elevated to the Supreme Court, we can call him Mr. Justice Justice.

I'm reminded of the war days, when we had to create a five-star rank for some of our top military men, to put them on an equal footing with their allied counterparts. The suggestion that the new rank be known as "Field Marshal," was quickly vetoed when it was recalled that Gen. George C. Marshall, then our Chief of Staff, would have to be called "Marshal Marshall."

THIS IS WASHINGTON?

"Boy, am I mad!" writes Mrs. Catherine Hackett of 2517 Mozart pl. nw.

"My husband is a sergeant in the Marine Corps Reserve. He was called to active duty in July and sent straight to Korea, where he's still with the First Marine Division.

"In a recent letter I asked what he'd like for Christmas, and his reply was, 'A rum cake from the (deleted) bakery.'

"So I called them up, told them the circumstances, and asked them to send the cake off in ample time for Christmas delivery. Their reply was: 'We're too busy to pack cakes for overseas shipment.'

"My husband was pretty busy trying to earn a living, but he found time to go off to Korea with his Division. I don't have the heart to write him that local businessmen are too busy making money to ship him a Christmas cake."

I'd very much like to hear from local bakers who are not too busy to concern themselves about a local fighting man. Let's not only get a fine rum cake to Sergeant Hackett, but a couple of extras for his buddies.

Please call me at National 4200. If I'm not at my desk when you call, leave your name and number with our efficient operators.

TRAVEL SIDE

"I was glad to see your items warning folks about getting out of an auto on the left, or travel side," writes Claud R. McCamment, who is in charge of the Pedestrian Protection Program of the American Automobile Association.

"We use the term 'travel side' because on a one-way street, when the car is parked against the left curb, the right door is the danger spot.

"Last year 71 persons lost their lives attempting to get out of their cars on the travel side. Many others were seriously injured.

"It's a dangerous practice and, incidentally, against the law here in the District."

Speaking of law, Weston Dodson of 4657 S. 34th st., Arlington, Va., tells me that the law says you can be held responsible for causing an auto accident even when your car is parked and the ignition is turned off.

Weston found out about that the hard way. He opened his door on the "travel side," and another auto came along and ripped it off.

District Liner Dodson not only had to pay for replacing his door, but was held responsible for the damage to the other vehicle.

He feels he's lucky he wasn't injured. But that's small solace to a fellow who realizes that he could have avoided the whole thing by stepping safely out to the sidewalk.

Donald L. E. Ritger of 3350 Valley dr., Alexandria, Va., borrows an old wisecrack from the truckers and coins the slogan:

"Get out on the curb side, not the sui-cide."

PUN FUN

Sam Lebow of 3220 Wisconsin ave. nw. says the younger generation is just as corny as we oldsters. He explains that he recently took his daughter, Louise, to Atlantic City and, strolling along the boardwalk, they came to a fortune-teller's stand — with the following results:

"Wouldst care to have your palm read, dear?"
I asked my daughter bright.
"No, thank you, sir," she slyly said,
"I'd rather have it white."

SILVER LINING

Wil Rouleau of 2800 Quebec st. nw. observes that one of the compensations of being a cliff-dweller and living in one small segment of a huge apartment building is that you don't have to worry about soapy windows on Halloween.

THOSE ANNOUNCERS!

Best pair of eyes among the radio announcers must surely belong to Harry Wismer. He "saw" Bus Ham from the press box in Philadelphia when the Redskins played the Eagles Sunday and I consider this quite a feat, inasmuch as The Washington Post's sports editor was at home in Falls Church, Va., nursing a bad cold.

COULD BE

Bob Morrow of 1755 P st., nw., wonders if the Russian delegation at the U. N. is acting with Malik aforethought.

Truman Heard Peace Plea at UN

By Drew Pearson

At the diplomatic reception following President Truman's address to the U. N. General Assembly, one of the Indian delegates, The Jam Saheb of Nawanagar, stepped up to the President and surprised him with an on-the-spot peace proposal.

Pearson

"Would it not be a good idea," said the Hindu diplomat, "to begin the Big Five peace talks here and now, Mr. Vishinski being in the same room with you, sir?"

Mr. Truman, slightly taken aback, said he had Secretary Acheson there for that job.

"Quite right, sir," replied The Jam Saheb with a low bow. "But there's an old Indian proverb that you can't keep a dog and do your own barking."

The President did not seem to catch the point, and the Indian delegate passed on.

Though what he said was meant in all friendliness, he had unwittingly touched on the fact that there had been a lot of official barking in Washington before the State Department and the White House could reach an agreement as to what the President should say in his U. N. speech about disarmament. Some advisers protested this was no moment to talk of anything but arming. Other advisers agreed that it was necessary to give Europe some hope for peace. The latter "hopeful" group finally won out.

Record on Holt

Watching the candidates — the motto, "Elect in haste, repent at leisure," has sent so many misfits to Congress that this column herewith calls attention to some of the little-realized qualities of congressional candidates.

Candidate for Congress in West Virginia is the onetime so-called "boy wonder of the Senate"—Rush Dew Holt. Before Pearl Harbor, Holt, then a Democratic Senator, was friendly with Nazi agents. Specifically he was dickering with George Sylvester Viereck, nephew of the Kaiser and the paid agent of Hitler, to publish a book on "Who's Who Among the Warmongers" which accused the Roosevelt Administration of pushing the United States into war with Germany.

Holt finished the manuscript and discussed its publication with both Viereck and Sigfried Holt, president of the Nazi-subsidized publishing firm, Flanders Hall. Most of these facts were published by the Washington Merry-Go-Round and later became the basis of the Federal prosecution of Viereck, ending in a six-year jail sentence handed Viereck by forthright Judge Dickinson Letts.

Today, former Senator Holt, hoping the public has forgotten his past, is running for the House of Representatives in the Third District of West Virginia.

Weight of the Press

The western European Ministers of Defense are now holding vitally important debates in Washington to plan North Atlantic defense in case of war. They came prepared for almost anything, including an invasion by Russia, but not for the invasion of the press that swarmed over them in the Pentagon.

For 15 minutes reporters fired questions and photographers popped flashbulbs. A newsreel cameraman's Kleig light fell over, and almost conked a Portuguese general on the head. Other photographers climbed on chairs, window sills, and each other for better shots.

One photographer even planted one foot on a window sill and the other on the shoulder of Britain's plump wing commander George Wiles.

This was too much.

"Good God," muttered Sir George, staggering under the weight, "how much support do these Americans have to have!"

Navy-Air Force Feud

Now that the Korean war is about over, the Navy League—civilian arm of the Navy—is stirring up the Navy-Air Force feud again and plotting a propaganda campaign that may blow the lid off unification.

Navy League president, Frank Hecht, has been holding closed-door meetings with Navy partisans across the country to map strategy for clipping the Air Force's wings. These meetings are supposed to be highly secret. However, while on the West Coast, I learned what happened at a typical meeting in San Diego.

It was attended by Navy League members and high Navy brass, who were notified by penny postcard. The brass included Vice Admiral Calvin Durgin, commander of the Western Sea frontier, and Rear Admiral Wilder Baker, commander of the Eleventh Naval District.

Hecht outlined a secret, three-point plan of action, as follows:

1. To reinstate Navy Day. This was abolished in favor of Armed Forces Day, but now the Navy wants it back again.

2. To place the Marine Corps commandant on the Joint Chiefs of Staff. This would give the Navy two votes on the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

3. To take tactical air support away from the Air Force and give it back to the Army. This would weaken the Air Force.

Hecht urged a campaign in the newspapers and in Congress to put across these three objectives. He charged that the "Korean war clearly shows the Air Force was unable to fill the Army's need for air support."

Note—It appears that the Navy League has already got to House Armed Services Chairman Vinson of Georgia who has called for earings on tactical air support. With the Navy League and the admirals secretly passing him the ammunition, this hearing may turn out just as explosive as the famous B-36 hearing.
